Allegan had a sensation this week almost equal to the case of Floyo Collins when George Peet, a farmer living north of town was caught in the bottom of his well. From Arvin Myers

North Chicago, Aug. 26.

It was almost a month ago I left Gobles to come here to spend my birthday and expected to be back home before this but you know expectations don't always pan out just as you expect.

On July 26 Betty Deyoe, Patty Baker and Mable Myers came across the lake to meet me.

July 31, Betty and Patty started with me. We arrived safely at about seven that evening.

I have been having a very pleasant time and have been in fairly good health for a boy of my age.

I enclose a brief notice clipped from a Wankegan paper as to how my 76th birthday was spent.

"A. W. Myers of 18th street celebrated his 76th birthday yesterday by taking a trip along the Fox River as far as Aurora. He was accompanied by his daughters, Mrs. F. E. DeYoe and Mrs. F. E. Baker and their families and by Mrs. Rolla Chamberlain of McHenry."

We drove that day 157 miles and were gone all day.

We passed through some splendid Illinois country both farms, cities and villages. It was just such a birthday present as I like. I received a good many cards from Gobles and other places which I appreciated.

Next Saturday, Aug. 31, the De-Yoe family are coming with me to Gobles and their visit will be brief as they go on Sunday to take Betty to her school at Morenci. They will be pleased to meet any who may wish to call at my home Sunday a. m. Arvin Myers.

BENTON HARBOR MARKET TOO SMALL FOR FARMERS

Unless steps are soon taken to relieve the congested condition of the fruit market at Benton Harbor the farmers who live some distance from the mart will cease to go there but will offer their produce at other points. One of the biggest jams that has been seen on the market for several years was witnessed recently, and growers had difficulty in reaching the market at all, as all the highways were congested. Over 500 growers sought to get their loads on the market at one time, which was impossible. If this is the condition at the present time, what will it be a few weeks later, with peaches, apples, pears, grapes and melons all coming on at the same time?

Grand Haven Group Is Urging Airport Survey

Manufacturers of Grand Haven petitioned the city council for a survey of the airport. The petition, sponsored by the manufacturers committee of the Chamber of Commerce is the result of the council's postponing a survey pending action by the new state aviation board.

The committee is composed of J. F. Johnson, Julian Hatton, Paul Johnson, Guy S. Warren, W. J. McCall, Ralph Wilson, William Stribley and William Stansbury. The Petition states the men believe the future of aviation is of vital importance to Grand Haven and request that a survey be made of the local airport to determine whether the present location is a proper one, whether the field is of adequate size and whether the field in connection with the sand dunes is favorable or unfavorable as to air currents.

To Replace State Hospital Cottage

The state administrative board has voted an appropriation of $7,000 for the replacement of Pratt cottage at the Kalamazoo state hospital, which recently was damaged by fire. It is expected the work will be started at once to relieve the exceptionally crowded condition of the state hospital.

THE GENIE AND THE BOTTLE—1929

VILLAGE OF BUCHANAN SOON TO BECOME A CITY

Buchanan citizens showed little interest in the city election held recently. Out of a normal voting strength of 1,750 electors, only 310 votes were cast.

The charter carried by a six to one vote—263 for and 42 against. Within a few days, when copies of the charter are filed with the secretary of state and the county clerk, Buchanan will become a fourth class city and will lose its identity as Michigan's largest incorporated village.

Five city commissioners were elected. They were: Frank C. Merson, 182 votes; Charles F. Pears (father of County Register of Deeds Donald Pears), 178; F. Clinton Hathaway, 164; Matthew J. Kelling, 157; Wilson Leiter, 154.

Merson and Pears serve until 1932, Hathaway and Kelling until 1931, and Leiter until the next election in April, 1930.

The other candidates were: Charles Boone, 133 votes; Clarence C. Runner, 121; A. Glenn Haslett, 115; Charles J. Bradley, 113; Richard M. Kean, 63; Harvey Bristod, 67.

Sees Record Auto Year

"As the third quarter gets under way, automobile production and sales are much stronger than last year and a satisfactory third quarter and record year for the industry is practically assured," according to B. W. de Guichard, president of the AC Spark Plug company, Flint.

"During the past six months," Mr. de Guichard said, "automobile factories here and in Canada manufactured 3,411,151 vehicles compared with 2,326,509 built in the same period last year, an increase of 47 per cent. Each month so far this year has been ahead of same months in preceding years. Despite this high output record, sales have kept closely in line with production and there has been no overaccumulation of stock."

"As the third quarter gets under way, automobile production and sales are much stronger than last year and a satisfactory third quarter and record year for the industry is practically assured," according to B. W. de Guichard, president of the AC Spark Plug company, Flint.

Would Build $200 Auto For Mail Order Trade

Negotiations are under way in New York financial circles for the financing of production of a $200 automobile of 60 inches wheelbase to be sold through one of the nation's largest mail order houses, according to information coming from that city this week. Three models have been built and demonstrated to engineers and financiers. It is the invention of James V. Martin of the Martin Aeroplane factory at Garden City, L. I.

The car eliminates the chassis and frame of the ordinary automobile and consists only of engine, body and wheels. Each wheel is independently mounted, there being no axles. Neither are there springs, each wheel being suspended with "aviator cord" rubber as in the case of airplane wheels.

Universal joints in the hubs provide the control of the wheels for steering. The car is equipped with a four-cylinder air-cooled motor and has such accessories as electric starter, speedometer, etc. It weighs 600 pounds and Mr. Martin claims it will do 50 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

The coupe model is said to seat two persons comfortably. Its wheelbase of 60 inches compares with 75 inches for the Austin, the smallest English-made car, and 103 1/2 inches for the Ford.

Martin declares he planned to have it shipped in a weather-proof packing case with a hinged door which may be used as a garage.

New Holland Harbor Pier Will Be Navigation Aide

Work on the new concrete north pier at Holland harbor is progressing rapidly and it is expected the structure will be completed within a few weeks. The transformation of the old weather beaten structure to one of solid concrete will give the harbor the much needed protection for navigation.

Capt. S. J. Toft, who has been in command of the Macatawa coast guard five years, is much pleased with the solidity of the new pier, which is about three feet above the water level. Soundings show a channel depth of 18 to 20 feet of water.

The water level is about 45 inches higher than five years ago, although it has dropped about four inches the past few weeks.

Ladder Falls, Clare Man Loses All His Zeal for Painting

Warren Heiser, recently retired after 10 years of continuous service of carrying mail from the depot to the Clare postoffice. He decided to take advantage of the freedom from a job that left him very little spare time and give his residence a much needed coat of paint.

When his son, employed by the Ann Arbor Railroad Co., came home one evening at 6 o'clock he found his father had everything in readiness to begin the painting job, and they placed the ladders at the end of the building.

After the evening meal Heiser mounted the ladder with the intention of working for an hour at his new task, but when he reached the top the bottom of the ladder slipped and the painter fell, striking the ground and sustaining two fractures of the wrist. Heiser has decided to abandon painting.

BAY CITY TO CURB BOAT SPEED

The speed of large boats plying on the Saginaw river is to be curbed, according to an announcement made by Chief of Police Davis of Bay City. The announcement came after the chief had received a communication from J. E. Summer, deputy collector of the port, regarding the violation of the marine law.

The speeding causes swells which annoy smaller running craft and makes considerable disturbance to others anchored on the shore, the latter said. The United States engineer department has advised the treasury department that the matter is subject to local enactment and local enforcement of rules of reasonable speed in the river.

According to the letter the duties of harbor master in such cities as Bay City are to be assumed by the chief of police. It was suggested by Mr. Summer that an example be followed such as has been set by Cheboygan, where the speed of navigation is limited to eight miles per hour and the river is posted with signs aboard advising boat drivers of this fact.

Many in Zeeland Back Tulip Week

More than 30,000 bulbs were ordered in the first three weeks of the tulip drive started in Zeeland. The drive was made in co-operation with Holland's second effort for an annual tulip time celebration early in the spring of next year. The bulbs are purchased and shipped directly from The Netherlands.

Holland's Game Club Names Site

Holland Conservation park is the name selected by the Holland Fish and Game club for its property on the Zeeland road, on which the rearing ponds are located.

Directors of the club have called a meeting to be held at the park for the purpose of giving its members and the general public an opportunity to inspect the grounds and the work accomplished.

Plans also are being formulated for a field day when contests may be staged in fly casting, bait casting, archery and trap shooting.

The club is considering other projects, including raising of pheasants and rabbit culture.

It has obtained the aid of the state conservation department in ridding Black lake of garfish, and nets sent here from Lansing have been set under the direction of Morris Kuite, local conservation officer. The first haul netted about 60.

Thompson Builds Hangar

Construction work on the Thompson Aeronautical Corporation's hangar at the Cleveland Municipal Airport is progressing rapidly and will be completed in time for the National Air Races to be held in the Ohio city which starts Aug. 24. "Tex" Marshall, vice president and general manager of T. A. C. announces.

When finished, the Thompson hangar will be the largest at the airport, Marshall stated. It will be 250 feet deep by 75 feet wide, giving a total floor capacity of 11,250 square feet.

Flint Industrial Hall Cornerstone Is Placed

Work has been started on the $750,000 Industrial Mutual Association auditorium in Flint, the building to be completed in October. The auditorium, the largest in Michigan outside of Detroit, will have a seating capacity of nearly 7,000. Designed primarily for the use of the association, which has a membership of more than 40,000 Flint factory workers, the auditorium also will be available for concerts and conventions.

The floor space is large enough so that three basket ball games may be played at one time. The stage is one of the largest in the state and will be designed for all kinds of athletic performances.

The auditorium was built to relieve congestion in the two gymnasiums of the association's clubrooms which occupy five floors in the Union Industrial Bank building. Clyde F. Wait, president of the association, laid the cornerstone. Forrest W. Boswell, personal service director of the Buick Motor company, who has been connected with the association for a number of years, spoke on "The Past, Present and Future of the Industrial Mutual Association." J. H. French, chairman of the building committee was master of ceremonies.

V. C. Futrelle, formerly connected with the Illinois theater in Chicago, as house manager, has been engaged as director of the auditorium.

The building is being erected on a site of nine acres on East Second avenue almost in the heart of the city. The association recently purchased Athletic park, a city park adjoining the auditorium site, for $100,000 for use in outdoor athletic events.

Wild Cherry Leaves Often Poison Sheep

Sheep raisers are advised to cut all wild cherry bushes in their pasture lots to prevent poisoning of stock. According to Dr. C. Dwight Marsh of the United States department of agriculture, the leaves contain prussic or hydrocyanic acid, and are dangerous to sheep if eaten in large quantities. As a rule, Marsh said, there is plenty of grass, sheep or other animals will not touch the wild cherry leaves.

Manistee Is Likely To Get Bass Pond

A state rearing pond for bass in Manistee county seems assured, Edward C. Burton, Izaak Walton league chapter president, stated following a conference with Henry A. Schuil of Grand Rapids, state superintendent of rearing ponds, and Claude Lydell, superintendent of the Comstock Park bass hatchery.

The conservation department, Burton declared, will build the pond and provide for its maintenance, if local Waltonians can obtain a suitable site, ranging from 15 to 40 acres, with a longtime lease.

A resolution has been passed by the executive committee of the league in special session, to request the aid of the supervisors of each township in locating a desirable site. It is hoped to have this state pond, which would supply the surrounding counties with bass fry and fingerlings, built by late fall, in preparation for next year.

The Kline pond at Quickama which twice was destroyed after its dam gave way, will be rebuilt under state supervision. Bluegills will be reared there instead of bass.

Lansing Population 101,875

Lansing's population, exclusive of East Lansing and the adjacent territory, is now estimated at 101,875 by McKinney Reynolds Company, Inc., publishers of the new city directory. The above figure shows the greatest increase in history during the past year, according to the publishers. Last year the population was estimated at 97,515 persons, an increase of 3,600 over 1927.

PORT HURON TO FIGHT TAX BOOST

Believing that the increase of $1,-200,000 as fixed by the state board of equalization was unfair, the city commission joined with the county of St. Clair in protesting the assessment.

State Senator Alex Cowan and Burt D. Cady were appointed to accompany the equalization committee of the St. Clair board of supervisors to Lansing to formally lodge the complaint with the state board.

The state board has fixed the valuation of St. Clair county at $109,000,-000.

Pentwater Votes For Village Hall

Pentwater now is assured a modern community building to provide village and township offices, a fire station, auditorium, small gymnasium, rest rooms, library, etc., as the result of a special election held recently.

Voters of both the township and the village approved bonding for $6,000 each to complete purchase of the old Community building and to remodel it to fill village and township needs. The township vote was 207 for to 60, against with the village polling 204 yes and 51 opposed.

Pentwater has been without a village hall since destruction by fire of the "white elephant." The Community house had been partly purchased by the Woman's club, the village and the township. Now the aims can be carried out fully.

Tri-Motored Plane Crashes With 10 Passengers

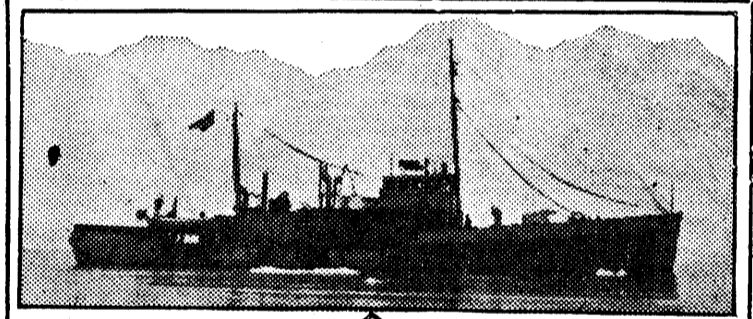

Here is the wreckage of the tri-motored passenger air liner on the Los Angeles to San Diego line after it crashed in the Los Angeles river bed shortly after taking off on its daily voyage, injuring its load of 10 people. Steel structure of the passenger cabin saved the occupants from instant death when the big plane flopped over on its back as it hit, wrecked beyond repair.

Miss Marian P. (olar) Bear, the new cinema star, resides in the national zoo at Washington, D. C., since her capture by a coast guard party on a Disco bay ice floe. Although Miss Marian is very pleased with the movie taken at the time of her capture, zoo attaches say she prefers domesticity to the hectic life of a film favorite and has spurned all contracts. Below, the coast guard patrol boat which captured Marian, with glacier in the background.

LIVESTOCK LOSSES MOUNT THIS YEAR

Livestock losses in shipments by Michigan farmers and shippers to the Detroit stockyards mounted sharply during the first six months of 1929, as compared with the same period of last year, according to the Michigan Livestock Loss Prevention Association.

An analysis of the situation at the receiving end showed that approximately 60 per cent more hogs, 50 per cent more sheep, 40 per cent more cattle and as many more calves died in transit than in the corresponding period last year.

One steer, bull, cow or heifer was found dead in every 502 head received, compared to 1 in 734 last year; 1 dead sheep for every 223 received, compared to 1 in every 494; 1 dead calf every shipment of 795, against 1 in 1,353; and 1 dead hog in every 115 received, compared with 1 in every 332 in the first six months of 1928.

The association's "detectives" found plenty of clues to the "murders." They discovered the stockmen and shippers were pulling the same old "boners" they were guilty of last year.

False economy in overloading cars in an attempt to slice freight charges was one of the minor charges laid at the shippers' door. Overexertion before loading also was responsible for many losses in route to market. Improper partitions, poor bedding and rough handling also took a heavy toll.

The Loss Prevention Association made no effort to estimate the actual losses in money value.

New Method of Preserving Fruit Is Now Being Tested

Strawberry shortcake as a part of the Thanksgiving feast; fresh peaches and cream in February.

The foregoing gastronomical combinations appear paradoxical to the Michigan eye, but they are to be a part of the menu of the average family within the next few years, according to William C. Geagley, state chemist. The means by which fresh fruits are to be made available for the table in winter is to be the use of improved refrigerator equipment in warehouses, stores and the home, Geagley said. It will be an extension of the old "cold storage" into new fields.

The chemist has left Lansing to inspect operations in the Grand Traverse region where, he said, fruits will be frozen this summer for use next winter. The process, while relatively new, is now being perfected and being put into use on a scale that places it on a commercial basis.

While the freezing process will never supplant the old methods of canning, Geagley believes that it will present the solution of disposal of fruit surpluses.

"When the process is worked out and the machinery for its operation installed," he said, "I think that fresh fruits will be delivered to the home just about as cheaply as are the canned goods. The process is simpler and ought to prove more economical. The fruit is simply coated with sugar, which is one of our best natural preservatives, and then frozen in packages. In that form it is ready for retail sale."

There is very little loss in freshness of the fruits in the freezing process, Geagley said, and it is difficult to distinguish those which really go direct to the table and those which have been held over for winter use.

Chemical examination reveals no difference, he said.

Consumers Benefit By Changes in Egg Production on Farm

Poultrymen by careful attention to the breeding and management of their laying flocks have effected a definite change in the egg market. According to H. L. Schrader of the United States Department of Agriculture this is evident as to both seasonal and annual production.

"The market receipts of fresh laid eggs during the late summer and fall months have been increasing the past few years," he comments. "This means that the pullets are being hatched and are maturing earlier, but it also denotes improved efficiency because the birds are laying more eggs when prices are highest."

From the standpoint of the consumer this tendency is of definite value. "Already we have noticed," Schrader said, "that the increased production in the season when eggs were formerly scarce has prevented prices from soaring to extremely high levels."

Two Methods in Self Feeders

Two methods are practicable in using self-feeders for hogs. The grain and protein supplement may be mixed and fed from the same hopper, or they may be fed separately, allowing the pig to choose for itself. The latter method is preferable, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Experiments show that the pig usually balances its ration properly, eating relatively less of the high-protein feeds as it gains in weight. If the pigs do not appear to be eating the proper proportions of each feed, however, the feeds may be mixed for them.

Potato Aphid Is Being Rated as Real Pest

Among the plant lice found on potatoes, the true potato aphid stands out preeminently as affecting the crop. The females sometimes reach one-sixth of an inch in size and in color they vary from green to pink. Both winged and wingless individuals occur on potatoes.

In the autumn, winged forms of the potato-louse fly to rose bushes, usually wild roses, and fasten their dark, glistening eggs to the bushes. From such eggs are hatched a multitude of aphids in the spring; so that the potato lice that one finds on the potato plant and its allies come from the over-wintering eggs found on roses. No more eggs are produced until the following autumn, at which time many lice fly back to the rose plants for the purpose of depositing eggs. On the potato, the lice bring forth their young alive, generation after generation, at short intervals; so that if cool weather prevails with plenty of moisture, the attack is likely to develop into very serious proportions.

The direct effect of an attack of the potato aphid is serious. When hordes of the tiny creatures suck the juice of the potato plants and concentrate on the new growth, a marked loss of vigor in the plant is sure to result, if indeed, the plants are not killed outright. Aside from this injury, the potato louse is capable of transferring the virus of disease from a sick plant to a healthy one, the mosaic in particular being transportable by aphids. It is not inconceivable that in the years to come we shall arrive at the conclusion that the extra labor made necessary, and the loss entailed by the potato aphid and mosaic will make it worth our while to eradicate the wild rose, at least in district where seed potatoes are commercially grown. Such a course would, undoubtedly, relieve the grower of much labor and expense, besides reducing to a minimum the losses now endured. In the meantime, use 40 per cent nicotine sulphate, at the rate of one pint to 100 gallons of Bordeaux; or use one of the other similar sprays with Bordeaux, applying thoroughly so as to hit each louse; or else use 2-3 per cent nicotine dust whenever the lice appear in large numbers. The only reason that a contact spray, such as nicotine, is not recommended as a regular routine treatment, is because of its high cost. Bordeaux alone is less efficient; but it is valuable as a fungicide and pays for itself as well in giving a partial control of the aphid.

Beef Price Serves To Place Check on Production of Milk

During the next few years there is expected to be little increase in the amount of milk produced in the United States, since the price of beef serves as a check on the expansion of dairying, it was explained on Aug. 3 by the Chief of the Bureau of Dairy Industry, O. E. Reed, Department of Agriculture. The full text of the statement follows:

The relation between the price of beef and the price of milk has an important influence on the number and age of the milk cows in the United States. This relation affects both the age at which milk cows are sold for slaughter and the number of beef-type cows milked. "Because of the present prices of beef," he comments, "dairymen are culling their low producers and aged cows to make room for the heifers just coming into milk. Indications are that for the next few years the price of beef will be an important factor in restricting the expansion of dairying, and the number of cows milked is expected to show little increase for several years. The gradual increase in the demand for milk due to increasing population seems likely to result in prices averaging sufficiently above feed costs to permit a gradual further increase in the production of milk per cow."

Zeeland Hatchery Season Is Ended

The hatching season of baby chicks closed with the last of millions of peepers leaving the Zeeland postoffice. During the past hatching season, which Postmaster W. Claver states was the largest in history, more than 5,000,000 chicks were given special handling rating.

According to the reports issued by the postoffice department Zeeland is rated as the largest chick shipping center in Michigan. During the peak of the past season three special cars were sent out on Monday and Tuesday of each week. One regular car was retained for daily use. Special mail clerks were employed by the government to care for the peepers enroute to the two distribution points, Grand Rapids and Chicago. A hatcheryman also accompanied each shipment in the special cars in order to insure the chicks the proper amount of care. The postal service next year will reimburse the shipper for chick losses en route providing the chicks are insured and proof can be produced showing that government employes were responsible.

Shipments from the Zeeland postoffice have been made to Maine, Montana, Arizona, Florida and other distant states within 72 hours after reaching the postoffice. Advance indications point to a very good season next year.

SUGGESTIONS ON SUMMER MANAGEMENT OF POULTRY

Pullets and cockerels which are not to be kept for egg production or breeding purposes, should be marked this month as their slow development and feathering become evident. The poor type individuals, too, belong in the same class. Many of the former may look well enough next month to be overlooked and be retained with the quicker feathering birds. Such birds should be marketed as soon as they are of sufficient weight.

The surplus cockerels and cull pullets over two pounds in weight will realize more profit to the operator if sold now than if allowed to gain more weight. The indications point to a heavy crop of late hatched chicks which, when marketed in the fall, may produce lower prices than last year.

Cockerels having well developed bodies with not too much comb or tail growth should be marked for breeding purposes if possessing good feather and the desired breed and variety characteristics. Great care should be taken to select maximum body capacity as indicated by good width and length of body. Stocky, full faced heads also are desirable. Avoid long, slender heads and beaks.

Lack of feed room is often the case this time of year, causing feed to become inaccessible and insufficient in quantity. It must be remembered that birds three or four pounds in weight eat nearly as much feed as mature birds. Outside feeders and waterers, placed in cool, shady places where the birds rest during the heat of the day, will aid in keeping the birds in better flesh. Much fall moult may be avoided through the precaution of having the birds in good condition.

Crowded houses cause many good birds to become pale faced and later join the cull class. They are often responsible for poor appetites, unkept condition of the feathers and a lack of that uniformity of size and development so much to be desired. It is better to shut the door and make the birds go to the trees or other buildings than to risk stunting them under such conditions.

Egg production is falling off fast this month. Much of this is due to overfeeding of grain, which fattens the birds but does not furnish egg building material in sufficient quantity for continued production. Overweight produces mortality during hot weather in particular. One hundred hens of the American breeds should consume about 24 pounds of mash and grain together per day and Leghorns should consume about 20 pounds. Not over one-third of the feed should be grain. See that the birds consume the proper amount of mash or two thirds of the total even if the birds have to be kept in the laying house until they consume the mash because of the accessibility of grain in lots nearby. Only as the grain is limited can egg production be controlled.

Keep the nonlayers out of the flock by culling out birds with yellow beaks and shanks. These birds are on a vacation which is likely to last three or more months. Such birds are likely in moult. Their feed bill will eat into the profits of the birds which are still producing.

WHY DO CHICKS DIE?

Ninety per cent of the sick and dead chicks received by the veterinary department of Purdue University during March and April of this year, had bacillary white diarrhea. These chicks came from 1,000 flocks. In most cases the letters that accompanied the different lots indicated that the owners did not suspect the true cause of the heavy death rate, and most of them believed that the feed was responsible for the loss.

The name "bacillary white diarrhea" is somewhat misleading. Many poultrymen believe that it is a disease of the intestines and the sick chicks always show a diarrhea. As a matter of fact, there is very little evidence of bowel trouble, either in the form of symptoms or lesions, in the most destructive outbreaks and the highly acute cases. Birds that survive the infection for several days or a week show lesions in the liver, lungs, heart and intestines. The lungs are commonly affected. This gives rise to difficult or labored breathing, and poultrymen have frequently mistaken bacillary white diarrhea for brooder pneumonia, a less common disease.

FEEDING WITH NEW CORN

Where there is a shortage of corn that is dry enough to grind, a mash that will serve quite well for a short period of feeding can be made up of the following ingredients: 100 pounds of ground oats, 10 pounds tankage or meat scraps and one pound of salt. If barley is available, 50 pounds barley and 50 pounds of oats are better than using oats alone.

This mash should not be fed as a permanent laying ration, however, but just as an emergency ration while the new corn crop is drying enough to be ground for feed. New corn can be fed in the ear if the birds are started on it gradually, with the amount increased from day to day. Even after the birds are accustomed to the new corn, old shelled corn should be fed once a day if it is possible to secure it.

Men seldom, or rather never for a length of time and deliberately, rebel against anything that does not deserve rebelling against.

Pretty girls care little about price when buying face powder. But even expensive powders may not be good for your skin. Cold cream or oil base powders clog pores. ### Medici Family Crest Now Pawnbroker Sign

In America there are but few shop signs reminiscent of an old day. The one most in use is that of the pawnbroker and his sign of three globes.

With this is connected a varying and interesting background. Averado de Medici was a commander of fighting men under the great Charlemagne. During the course of his battles on behalf of his overlord he met and slew the giant Mugello. As the spoli of war, he took the giant's club, to which for effective service in action were affixed three iron balls swinging upon a short chain.

It can readily be understood that a well-placed blow from such a club in the hands of an angry giant would certainly, to use slang, "make the birdies sing," and the three effective additions to the club would complete the picture. Therefore, Averado might well have added the three globes to the family crest. In later years the Medici took to the gentle but effective art of poisoning and as a side line engaged in the business of loaning money, using the memory of Mugello's battle-ax fixtures as their insignia.—Kansas City Star.

THE GYPSY MOTH

By JOHN AMES

By JOHN AMES

Larry Nelson regarded the Armistice as a personal affront. One of twelve thousand more or less full-fledged American aviators turned loose upon a dull world, now that the war was over, he had come no nearer to the field of action than Kelly Field, in Texas.

Bereft of his wings, his desire for adventure unsatisfied, he decided not to finish his training as an aviator. He had soared above the realm of crawling or puny-winged insects and would have no further truck with them.

Probably it was just as well that he so decided. There was nothing in his subsequent career to indicate that the world had lost a great scientist in the making of a gypsy flier. Field work might have held his interest, but not the laboratory. A decade later, leaving behind him his reckless twenties, he was to achieve fame as an aviator who measured his flights by continents and oceans; but with that phase of his career the public is already sufficiently familiar.

This chronicle deals with his roving days as a gypsy flier when, he afterward declared, he had often faced extinction in hundred-mile hops with dubious war-surplus planes and automatic engines than in his later great flights in the pilot's seat of powerful machines as reliable as any ocean liner.

The saga of the scattered tribe of gypsy fliers that roamed the skies over the American continent, before federal legislation governing commercial aviation drove them into registered respectability, has been only fragmentarily recorded, and that mostly in casual reports.

Planes Often Out of Whack
The equipment of a gypsy pilot, or sky tramp, usually consisted of a war-surplus plane bought at government auction sales for a few hundred dollars, a small kit of tools and a package of cigars. Frequently they worked mostly by giving exhibitions at the county fairs and at carrying sight-seeing passengers for $5 to $15 a ride—if the passenger lived to pay and the pilot to collect.

The obsolete war planes, even when they were delivered in a fairly air-worthy condition, soon got out of whack; and frequently the pilot, after paying his traveling expenses, didn't have enough cash remaining to buy sufficient gasoline and oil for the hop to the next town in prospect. Larry's gas tank once ran dry when he was within five miles of his objective. Luckily he found himself three thousand feet above a pasture large enough for an emergency landing. And fortunately the landing was made a few hundred yards from a roadside filling station.

"Give you a flight for twenty gallons of gas for my bus," offered Nelson. The operator, it happened, had a special reason for desiring to impress a young lady of the nearby town, and wanted to fly. But he hesitated, scratching his head.

"You're sure it's safe? How do you get down if something happens to the engine?"
"Oh, we always manage to come down," replied Larry with a reassuring grin.

The full implication of this honest reply failed to soak in, and the deal was made. Nelson got his gas, gave the attendant a ten-minute turn over the pasture, and proceeded to the fair grounds.
Cloud Hoppers Followed Birds
Cloud-hopping itinerants like Nelson crossed and recrossed the continent in a season. Most of them, like other migratory birds, followed the climate, spending summers in the North and winters in the South. They were to be found occasionally in towns below the Mexican border, having cheerfully ignored danger of arrest for flying across the international boundary. A small bribe to a local official usually adjusted any international complication.

The gypsy flier was no preferred risk of the insurance company. Lloyd's probably would have been willing to bet ten to one against his flying safely from one township to another. But he believed that man ought to fly; that the earth was merely a convenient place to take off from; and he had the courage of his convictions.

Larry Nelson had been barnstorming the South. A good contract in Atlanta, making flights over the city to advertise a film of which a daredevil aviator was the hero, had put him a few hundred dollars ahead. Here also he picked up Andy Johnson, whose talents included exceptional ability as an airplane mechanic, a rigger, chute jumper, wing-walker and corn likker consumer.

Andy sold his services to Larry on the proposition that, working a double act, they could make a lot more money. Nelson was eager to run his small stake into enough to buy a new plane, and he readily believed that Johnson, himself a Southerner and knowing the ways of the South, could help him land more business than he could hope to get working alone.

"You know, Larry," advised the latter, "there are still quite a few folks down in these hills who pronounce 'damn-Yankee' like one word. They'll like you all right, and they'll like your stuff, but your Northern accent won't help you down here the way a Southern accent helps in New York."

Andy immediately proved his ability as a salesman of death-defying aerial exhibitions by landing, over long-distance telephone, a contract to fly for a civic celebration at Savannah.

"And if we give them a good show, as we sure will," he said, "we ought to be good for a few Sunday afternoons of passenger-carrying, with a 'chute jump and a few stunts for crowd bait. Daffin Field is near a street car line and Savannah folks will turn out to pay loads."

Most of the airway from Atlanta lay over the route of Sherman's historic march to the sea. Nelson looked over the side of his cockpit and could understand why, even now that the sons of the South and the North had fought side by side in a greater war, it was still unpopular to mention this devastatingly decisive movement, the effect of which had been to make Southern victory in the Civil War impossible.

After more than half a century there was still to be seen an occasional ruin of what had been a planter's home. A blackened chimney remained as a monument. The airplane that sped over it (70 miles an hour was fast enough for an ordinary plane in those days) would traverse in a few hours, between luncheon and dinner, terrain that had taken Sherman's troops weeks to march across.

Smoke Wispis Danger Signs
"I'm a reconstructed rebel—that's just what I am," sang Andy softly to himself as he refueled at Macon. And then a bit louder, as he noted Nelson's grin—
"And for this land of freedom I do not give a damn!"
"Is that sentiment still popular with you hill-billies?" asked Nelson, as he climbed into the cockpit.

"Hell, no," replied Andy, screwing tight the radiator cap. "Especially not in the hills, and particularly not among the moonshiners in them hills."
"It's perfectly safe, then, for a stranger, even with a Yankee accent, to prow around among them?" asked Larry.

"No, I don't reckon it's as safe as all that; at least not in some of the country we're likely to fly over. You may have seen wisps of smoke comin' up now and then from a wooded hill-side."
"Yes—they have been useful wind indicators."
"Right enough, Larry, but keep out of rifle range when you see them. Lately some of the moonshiners have got to suspectin' that, while the reverend ones have been layin' off, so far as work in the hills is concerned, the government is beginnin' to spy on them from the air."

"I was ferryin' a ship from Montgomery to Augusta one afternoon, hardly more than a month ago, when I got careless and flew less than a thousand feet over some smoke. On account of the motor I didn't hear the crack of the rifle, but I knew that a pot shot had been taken at me when a jagged hole appeared in the left lower wing and another in the fuselage just behind the gas tank.
"I pulled up out of there so quick that I almost stalled the ship, and for the rest of the trip it would have taken artillery to reach me."

"All right, Andy, we'll let them fix their own ground rules—as long as the old OX keeps revving up," said Nelson.
Johnson's love for sawn likker gave Nelson little or no concern. He never appeared for duty affected by it, but loved to get into action when a hard day's work had brought reward and the prospect of a day off.

They were ready to take off for Savannah. As he was about to climb into the rear cockpit (Nelson always flew from the front seat, the most dangerous in the event of a crash), Johnson indicated the insignia painted on the side of the fuselage.
How Plane Got Name
"How come you call this ship The Gypsy Moth, Larry?"
"Oh, just a folk notion. Before I got to worrying about bugs in airplane motors I studied entomology—the habits and love life of insects. So when this bus let me down in a cotton

WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 1

Warm days and cool nights will be the opening program of weather routine for the week beginning September 1st in Michigan.

Some local rain and thunder storms will likely follow over from last week into this. In some sections these storms will develop into rather severe proportions and strong winds will do damage to exposed portions.

Along towards the middle part of the week these conditions will clear up and the most of the remainder of the days are expected to remain mostly fair.

Some threatening, windy weather may put in an appearance about Wednesday or Thursday but precipitation will be light for the state as a whole.

More active storm conditions will show up in Michigan at the end of this week. Temperatures will make radical jumps upward during Friday and Saturday. Increasing cloudiness will follow and there will be a day or two of wind and rain.

Best Time This Week
For farming—September 7, 7 to 9:30 a. m. and 2:30 to 4 p. m.
For fishing—September 7th.
For baking—September 5 and 6.

field—the radiator had cracked—it mused up half an acre of plants ready for picking. One of the first things you learn about gypsy moths is that they are 'highly destructive to foliage.'"
The noise of the motor blanked the mechanic's grinning comment, which was, "Another fool pilot." It was Andy's term of endearment for fliers he liked.

They put on a successful show at Savannah; successful financially as well as artistically. And two Sunday afternoons of exhibition work and passenger-carrying at Daffin Field increased their little capital to five hundred, after all expenses were paid, including replacement of a new strut.

That split strut had come near to giving the crowd an additional thrill—the thrill of a fatal crash. Larry had been giving Andy lessons in stunting and had decided to let him try his first loop. Then he was to take over the controls himself for a final series of stunts.

The Jenny (JN training type) was a two-seater having double controls and could be flown from either the front or rear cockpit. Andy was to open wide the throttle and pull back on the control stick until the ship obeyed this co-ordination of forces and followed its nose around in the conventional straight loop. It was agreed that if anything went wrong Andy was to throw his hands off the controls and leave the rest to Larry.

Blood Curdling Tail Spin
It wasn't Andy's fault that a tired motor slackened when the plane was upside down. The Gypsy Moth hung almost motionless in the air for an instant, then fluttered into a tail-spin, and a wild whirling plunge through a mile of space. While there's altitude there's hope, thought Larry as he seized the stick and got the rudder bar under his feet.

The Highest Bidder
The preacher had given a little boy 10 cents every Sunday to keep grandfather awake during the sermon.
The boy was faithful for three Sundays, but the fourth he let his grandfather sleep.
"Didn't I tell you that I would give you a dime every Sunday to keep your grandfather awake?" asked the preacher.
"Yes," replied the boy, "but grandpa gives me a quarter to let him sleep."

Olivet Graduate Attracts Notice

Earl C. Hazel of Portland, who was graduated from Olivet college with honors for a bachelor of music degree at the June commencement and also completed his course in the art department of the college, is receiving marked recognition for his work in painting, both canvasses and mural work, which points toward a brilliant future and may outstrip his musical career, for which he specialized while attending Olivet.

Following commencement Hazel sold several oil paintings for $350. He also was complimented with an invitation from George C. Sprague of New York city a trustee of the college who is interested in art, to spend the summer months at his summer home among the mountains of Vermont, that Mr. Hazel may have an opportunity to transfer to canvass some of the beauty of the mountain scenery.

The mural decorations of the art rooms in the new dormitory of the college are the work of Hazel, and was a feature of the art exhibit that attracted all visitors. A painting by Hazel was hung in the art exhibit held in Grand Rapids in May and it attracted much favorable comment.

Orchestra Camp Bonds to Be Sold

The National High School Orchestra Camp association at Traverse City will sell the remaining $30,000 of the $50,000 in debenture bonds authorized a year ago.

An accounting made to the camp's board of control, shows a balance of $7,000 thus far this season, after all operating expenses are paid. This is more than three times the amount necessary to pay the interest due on the outstanding bonds. The camp began last year with 110 students. This year the enrollment is 238, an increase that indicates success in reaching 300, the capacity of the camp, next year. Tuition is $300 for each student. The camp is a nonprofit corporation.

Builds Huge Plane

Lieut. Lee Gehlbach, a graduate engineer and former Selfridge field flyer, after two years of study and preparation secretly, is completing an eight-place monoplane at Mt. Clemens in which he and Maj. Thomas G. Lanphier, operations manager of Transcontinental Airways, plan to make a non-refueling endurance flight and a transcontinental non-stop hop in about four weeks.

A 425 horsepower Pratt & Whitney Wasp engine will be used in the plane which has a wingspread of 62 feet and a body measurement of 36 feet. It is designed for a cruising range of 6,500 miles or 75 hours of endurance flying.

Poems That Live

"THERE IS A LADY SWEET AND KIND"

There is a lady sweet and kind,
Was never face so pleased my mind;
I did but see her passing by,
And yet I love her till I die.

Her gesture, motion, and her smiles,
Her wit, her voice my heart beguiles,
Beguiles my heart, I know not why,
And yet I love her till I die.

Cupid is winged and doth range,
Her country so my love doth change;
But change the earth, or change the sky,
Yet I will love her till I die.

—Unknown.

Individuality of Detail Marks Smart Mode

By LUCY CLAIRE

Dressmaker touches and the diversity of style in unusual handlings have gone far to individualize costumes. One sees a frock so simple it can readily be made by the home dressmaker, or so intricate our "Martha by the day" would have considerable difficulty in repeating it. But all have those little individual touches that achieve that something different so desired by smart women. The features of the mode for fall, which have been established through a long tryout dating back to the Riviera and Palm Beach last winter, are the long silhouette, the higher waistline and the longer skirt, with more fitted lines. These are the features expressed through the dressmaker touches in a wide diversity of style.

The long silhouette with the fitted lines and higher waistline is well expressed in the diagonally closing coat frock at the left of the sketch. While simple enough to be reproduced by the home dressmaker, it is as smart as one could wish in a frock of this type. It is shown here fashioned from grayish green suede cloth, button trimmed, and with box pleats at the back extending from the slit seam which indicates the waist. The pleats afford the necessary fullness. Black kid pumps and a black felt hat complement the frock. Much black is being used with green in accessories.

More Intricate Model

Next to this is shown one of the more intricate models in an afternoon frock of blue flat crepe. The skirt is a wrap around model with fullness introduced by means of a shirring at the front. This fullness also achieves the uneven hemline. A sash slips through the wide hip yoke at the closing and terminates in a bow. A diagonal neckline termination repeats the bow effect. A chiffon yoke raises the neckline. Dark blue shoes and a hat of matching felt complete the costume.

Expressing the vogue for dark evening colors is the very simple, but extremely smart, evening frock of dark blue tulle sketched at the right. There is no other trimming than a band of large colorful flowers cut from patterned chiffon and applied at the waistline, with a repeat posed low on the full skirt. This is a very youthful model well adapted to the slim silhouette of the deb or sub deb. It is an excellent idea for the bridesmaid's frock developed in tones chosen for the color scheme of the wedding. The slippers may be of gold or silver kid, or of crepe dyed to match the frock.

Old Bell Lost in 1928 Stolen, Thief Admits

Mystery which surrounded the disappearance last fall of the historic old bell which was used first on the seminary, then on the school, and finally on the fire house at Richland, nine miles north of Kalamazoo, was solved recently when Raymond Alger, 32 years old, confessed to Barry county officials that he had sold the bell for junk.

It was believed that Hallowe'en jokers had moved the bell from the belfry, and a careful search was made. It was valued particularly by the Richland community because of its historic interest. For nearly a century it had served the community, first in the old seminary until that building burned, then in the school and later as a fire bell.

Alger, who was charged with other thefts in Barry county, confessed also to stealing the bell from Richland in Kalamazoo county, which he said he sold as junk for $12.

Words of Wisdom

Heaven takes care that no man secures happiness by crime.—Alfieri.

Remorse goes to sleep during a prosperous period and wakes up in adversity.—Rousseau.

Church Will Celebrate Its 62nd Anniversary

Third Reformed church, Holland, next month will celebrate the sixty-second anniversary of its organization. Recent statistics credit the church with 1,054 communicant members, the largest of the 133 churches connected with the particular synod of Chicago in the Reformed Church of America.

The first edifice was destroyed in the big fire of 1871, the framework of the second building was leveled by a severe windstorm, and the present building, since extensively enlarged and remodeled, was erected in 1874.

Third church has been served by eight pastors, including Rev. James M. Martin, present pastor, who assumed charge seven years ago. Two former pastors are living. Three former pastors accepted calls to professorships in Western Theological seminary and four members of the seminary faculty are enrolled as members of the church. The church supports three missionaries—two in Japan and one in Mexico.

A Scotchman found it necessary to notify his wife that he might not be home that evening, in which case he would phone her.

"I'll ring you at six," he told her. "When you hear the bell you'll know it's me. Don't answer it and I'll get my nickel back."

Film Beauty Quits Director Mate

Although no divorce is contemplated, Dorothy Gulliver, Salt Lake City beauty contest winner, who entered moviedom several years ago, admits she and her husband, C. W. DeVito, assistant director, are not on very good terms. Miss Gulliver was a Wampus baby star two years ago.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

ATTENTION, MR. EDISON

Dear Tom Edison: Not being a genius or a candidate for a job in your plant, may I answer a question or two of your recent genius test? I've been thinking over the questions that were published in the newspapers at the time of the examination of the 49 boys.

Please let me answer the easiest question, at least. It's this one:

"Which one of the following would you be willing to sacrifice for the sake of being successful: happiness, comfort, reputation, pride, honor, health, money, love?"

The answer, Mr. Edison, is just too easy.

I wouldn't be willing to sacrifice any one of the things you list "for the sake of being successful."

If I were to sacrifice any one of them, I would sacrifice some part of success, and what would be the use of throwing away success for the sake of being successful?

Of course, the obvious thing to say is, "I'd sacrifice comfort."

Not! What would be the use of being successful if you were to be uncomfortable for the rest of your life? Or, is it possible to be successful and uncomfortable at the same time? If I were as successful as, let us say Thomas A. Edison, and were uncomfortable, I'd cry for my unsuccess and my comfort.

Or, it would be easy to say, "I'd trade money for success. Give me money to support one's success, no matter in what field success may lie. One might be a successful artist, for instance, in the matter of painting fine pictures, and let one's descendants harvest the coin crop. That plan doesn't appeal to me at all. I love my descendants as well as the next fellow, but let them hustle for their money. I don't envy the starving geniuses of yesterday. Not a bit.

Happiness? Now, Mr. Edison, you shouldn't suggest such a silly procedure as sacrificing happiness for success. It can't be done. Nobody can be at once successful and unhappy. If one is unhappy he is not successful. So you pose an impossible alternative.

Reputation? One needn't have a world-wide reputation to be successful, but one can't be happy without having a good reputation. To have an ill reputation among one's fellows makes one unhappy, and therefore unsuccessful.

Of course, the man who lacks pride, honor, love or health is not a success. So one couldn't sacrifice those things for success, any more than one could sacrifice all meat for a good steak dinner. You couldn't have steak without meat, and neither could you have success without pride, honor, love and health.

Is the question answered? Perhaps I rate zero. But that's the way I feel about it, Mr. Edison. In this day and place, one needs success, and I'll get along with out the money."

That would sound fine. But futile.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

By Madame Rubinstein

I have written to you so much about exercising that I almost hesitate to write again. Still, you know, exercise is the one sure way to keep your body young. Not all exercise, of course. Some forms are positively harmful. The very strenuous exercise that overtrained athletes go in for is bound to bring unpleasant results later on, unless care is taken. And some exercises that are too concentrated on certain muscles—as, for example, toe dancing—develop hard, lumpy muscles that are anything but attractive. But almost any exercise, intelligently held within the bounds of moderation, is good.

But gentle, rhythmic exercise is best for you—it makes you feel and look younger. It keeps your body working smoothly and your blood bounding buoyantly as it does in the veins of a healthy child. Smooth, well-molded muscle contours and a brisk circulation preserve the look of youth almost indefinitely.

Swimming is the most perfect and pleasant of all "daily dozes." Perhaps you don't like to get up in the morning and breathe deeply and stretch and bend. Of course you should, but perhaps you don't. Then you must do another kind of exercise. Why not swim? Why not make the most of summer's opportunities for growing healthy and beautiful and having a good time at it. You have to breathe deeply when you swim and all muscles have to work and the mind is never concentrated on work-a-day problems when you body is gliding through sunny waters. Every woman can swim. If she wants to, enough.

Luckily this most perfect form of exercise is within the reach of all. If you live far from the sea coast or river or lake, plan to take your vacation near some sizeable body of water where you can swim—even an indoor pool is much better than no swim at all. But outdoor swimming is best. Protect your skin with a coating of olive oil, better still, a thin layer of sunproof cream to prevent severe burning. Then let the sun fill your body with its healthful violet rays—and let your muscles move and play rhythmically.

Swimming develops long, graceful muscles, not the hard, lumpy kind. Perfect swimmers have perfect figures. And swimming is good fun. It's the most enjoyable, lazy, sensible, satisfactory type of exercise to take daily on your vacation. Besides being extremely smart. Every fashionable woman swims today, as every sensible woman swam before. Why not follow health, beauty and fashion? Youth has no monopoly on the waterways. They belong to you, too, and to every woman. Why don't we all get into the swim?

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Broiled Fish	Egg Sauce
Parsley Potatoes	Beets
Lettuce Salad	Peach Cup
Black Coffee or Iced Tea

Amounts for these recipes will serve four. Fruit desserts are recommended especially for warm weather by this department. They may or may not be topped with whipped cream.

Today's Recipes

Broiled Cod with Egg Sauce—Wash carefully two and one-half pounds sliced young cod, dry and place on greased broiler rack. Broil under moderate heat ten to fifteen minutes, turning once. When the fish begins to separate in flakes, it is sufficiently cooked. Sprinkle with salt and pepper while cooking. Serve with this egg sauce: Melt two tablespoons butter, add three tablespoons flour, one-half teaspoon salt, and one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Stir until smooth. Add one and one-half cups hot water gradually. Stir constantly until reaching boiling point and allow to boil gently for five minutes. Remove from heat, add two tablespoons butter, one egg yolk beaten, one teaspoon minced parsley and one teaspoon lemon juice.

Peach Cup—Make a syrup of a cup of water and a cup of sugar boiled together for five minutes and cooled. Have the following fruit cut up: Two cups of fresh peaches, sliced; two oranges, diced; one-half cup pineapple, diced; add the juice of one lemon to the fruit, and then pour the syrup over the entire mixture. Allow to stand for one hour. Serve in sherbet glasses, garnish with whipped cream. Top with a maraschino cherry.

SUGGESTIONS Corn Off the Cob

In cooking fresh corn on the cob surround it with a generous quantity of boiling water, in order to lower the temperature of the water as little as possible when the corn is put in. Be careful not to cook sweet corn too long, or it is likely to be tough and tasteless. The sooner corn on the cob is cooked after picking, the finer the flavor. While corn on the cob is almost always boiled, it can also be roasted or steamed. Sometimes when corn is steamed at a clam bake or barbecue one layer of the green husk is put back on the cob after the silk has been removed.

Important Trifles

When cooking macaroni use plenty of water. This is the secret of good macaroni. Don't forget to allow one teaspoonful of salt to each quart of water.

For luncheon fry strips of bacon and remove to hot platter to keep crisp and hot. Dip slices of pineapple into flour (both sides) and brown in a little hot bacon fat. With this, serve crisp, cold lettuce.

Baked bananas over which lemon juice has been squeezed are especially tasty served with baked meats, particularly with baked ham.

When your hands become stained with fruits while preserving, you can readily remove stains by rubbing with tomato juice.

With the Women of Today

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

At the recent convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women, held at Mackinac Island, Mich., Miss Marion M. McClench of Ann Arbor, Mich., was elected president, and Mrs. J. B. Bowman, Richmond, Va., first vice president.

Miss McClench is an insurance woman and self-made by choice. That is, she insisted on going out on her own and making her way without the help of her father, the late William W. McClench, president of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, with headquarters in Springfield, Mass. She went to the Detroit office of the company and made a conspicuous record of success for herself.

Miss McClench is a graduate of Smith college. She was a member of the original group of 200 women who gathered in St. Louis in July, 1919, to organize the federation, and was recording secretary of the organization for one year and president for two years of the Michigan Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Few women can boast as wide a range of interests as can Mrs. Bowman, first vice president of the federation. She is president of the Expert Letter Writing Corporation, a large direct mail advertising concern; treasurer of the Southern Women's Educational Alliance, chairman of the salary commission of the Richmond Y. W. C. A., vice president of the Richmond Community Recreation Association and mother of 4-year-old twins.

Mrs. Bowman's first business experience was as organizer of the women's department of the Merchants' National Bank of Richmond. From the banking field she turned to direct mail advertising. She was the first active president of the Virginia Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Successful Author Is Blind

Miss Elin Hoek of Stockholm, Sweden, author of a new book, "His Majesty's Neighbors," is blind. Although she never has seen the streets and houses of which she writes, nor the people who live in them, she presents an accurate and vivid picture. Her writing is done in the library for the blind. She uses the typewriter expertly, and after she has written her tale someone reads it off to her and she takes it down in shorthand, making corrections as she goes along. The shorthand system she uses is especially devised for the blind and Miss Hoek's efficiency in its use is so great that she has received a gold medal for it. Her previous book was called "Plain People."
