Petrol Tin Invaluable

Keep

to Rhodesian Settler

One of the most generally used articles in the rural homes of Rhodesia is the petrol tin. Petrol and coal oil are sold in most parts of Africa in tins containing four gallons apiece. These tins are the settler's best friends, for he puts them to a hundred uses. In Rhodesia, tins are sawn asunder with a can opener, beaten flat and used as rain-proof roofs for small sheds and lean-tos. With a little manipulation a settler will make guttering, and some spouting may be made from them to carry precious rain water from roof to water tank.

With notes punched in the sides and a few blazing logs within the tin, the settler has an excellent brazier by which he may smoke his pipe and read his menth-old home news on bitter July nights. He fits a tin into a loose cage of mosquito wire netting and fills the space between with charcoal which he keeps wet. Behold his dairy safe, where his butter will not turn to oil nor his jug of milk sour in the torrid November days. From a tin he makes a camp oven for the Sunday roast. In it his bread and cereals are stored from insect pests.

Destructive Fires Set

by Terror-Raden Cats Two stories from Paris tell of two cats, each of whom burned a house down. From Montbeliard, in the east. comes the tale of a cat which, in the absence of its mistress, crawled up on the mantelpiece to reach a chunk of meat that hung above. It lost its footing and fell into the fire. Crazed with fright and pain it streaked out of the window and to its usual haunt, the granary. Its blazing fur set fire to the building, which burned to the ground. The other tale came from Lorient on the west coast. There a ent had been plagued by two small girls, who had been left at home alone. The elder of the two snatched a coal from the fireplace and put it on the at's back. The animal rushed from the room into the adjoining bedroom and leaped into the bedclothes. When the resulting blaze was finally perceived by the girls it had grown to overwhelming proportions. The girls rushed out of the house and the building was turned down.

Tracing the history of America eating habits in the World's Work, Si las Bent, the writer, finds himself amazed at the gastronomic feats of our forefathers as they are recorded in the chronicles of the times.

"In the effort to show that the Pilgrim Fathers were by no means abstemious to drink, it has also been revealed that they oy no means abstemious to food," he says. "How their tables grouned—quarters of mutton and legs of beef, whole hams, several kinds of fish, corn bread and light bread, tankards of ale and quarts of wine! One is amazed that the poor fellows survived."

Phosphorescence

Occasionally the humble but useful potato, when stored in a dark cellar, becomes luminous, much to the astonishment and consternation of the observer.

Many a story of a weird specter, or ghostly visitant from another world, has had its origin in some phosphorescent display. There are many forms of more or less luminous fungus which live in woods and forests, caves and churchyards, and their mysterious bluish-green light, shining out in the hours of darkness, would doubtless fill the superstitious mind with awe and fear.

Sneezing Superstition

Ancient rabbinistic tradition asserts that from the time of Adam to Jacob sneezing was a sign of death. Jacob thought long on these things. He finally went into prayer for a repeal of the law. So successful was he in his petition that the phenomenon of sneezing ceased to be a sign of death and became an infallible sign of life. After Jacob's day, when children came into the world, they announced their arrival by sneezing. So that when the son of the Shunamite was called to life by the power of Elisha, "The child sneezed seven times and the child opened his eyes."-New York Times.

Something Omitted

Modeling in clay, now taught to children in many efementary schools, is taken very seriously by some of the young sculptors, judging from a story told by Mrs. Laura Knight, A. R. A. A friend of hers was one of a party who were inspecting the works of various pupils, and they had gathered round to look at a statuette of a little old lady which a thild of five or thereabouts had just flaished. "I wonder what the old lady is thinking about?" somebody.sai4. "Oh, she can't think," replied the tiny sculptor, "I didn't make her any brains,"

Phoenician Dental Art Preserved in the Louvre

The first false teeth, as far as known today, were worn by a woman of Sidon in Phoenicia about 300 B.C., according to Dr. Roy L. Moodie, of Santa Monica, Calif. The Phoenician. woman's jaw, with the false teeth, is now preserved in the Louvre, in Paris. The two right incisors are represented by artificial teeth, held in place and bound to each other by gold wire. The wire has been drawn through careful perforations in the artificial teeth. Although the Egyptians pioneered in treatment of many diseased conditions of the body, this sort of dental replacement apparently was never devised by Egyptian physicians. Thousands of mummies, representing 7,000 years of life in Egypt, have been examined, but no clear evidence of such repair work has ever been found. It appears that we not only owe our alphabet and numerous geographic discoveries to the restless, inquiring minds of the Phoenicians, Doctor Moodie points out, but also we are indebted to them for this entrance into prosthetics, which is a particularly valuable field of dentistry.

Californians Proud of Mission Fathers' Work

The first settlement of California is attributed to Father Junipero Serra, who founded the mission of San Diego de Alcala. For the next 13 years be traveled on foot north and south over a distance of 600 miles, establishing and fostering missions and preaching to the natives. During those 13 years he founded nine missions, which were afterward expanded to 22 by his successors. The history of California began with—and for more than half a century was the history of-these missions, of their founding and operations. About century ago, however, they began to decline in power and influence, but they are still regarded with reverence by the Californians, as a part of the history of their state and of its foundation. Some of these missions are now in ruins, but others are in good repair, and still open for service.

MICHIGAN RANKS HIGH IN HUNTING. FISHING LICENSES

Michigan ranked among the four leading states of the country in funds received from the sale of hunting and fishing licenses during 1927-28, according to information furnished by the U.S. department of agriculture. The peninsular state accumulated a total of $710,523.47 from hunting and fishing licenses, while Pennsylvania showed the largest return with $1,006,157.70 from hunting licenses alone. New York was also high on the list with $699,873.52 from combined hunting and fishing licenses.

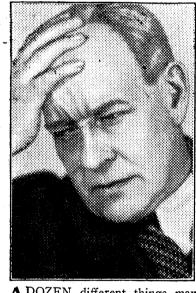

New York had the largest number of resident hunters and fishermen but Michigan was close in the running with 362,808 hunting licenses. Ohio outstripped Michigan by its total of 368,377 hunting permits, and Pennsylvania did better with 515,-

While Michigan, New York and Pennsylvania are leading the race for the premier hunting and fishing state, and Michigan is behind these two, it is pointed out that the concentration of population is markedly higher in the eastern region. Of the states bordering on the great lakes, Michi-gan, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wiscon-sin and Minnesota, the Wolverine state had no strong competition aside from that offered by Ohio.

Michigan outranks by a safe margin the seven states of Idaho, Maine, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Oregon and Tennessee combined for the number of hunting and fishing licenses sold during the years of 1927 and 1928.

Six Alligators Added To Charlotte Park Zoo

Labor Day crowds visiting Bennett park found some new attractions in the zoological park conducted by H. Hugh Green, in the shape of six alligators, placed in a new basin which had just been prepared for them. The amphibians were the gift of John Ball park, Grand Rapids. The largest one is about five feet in length and the smallest about two feet. The Grand Rapids park management still has several alligators left, all of which are larger than the ones given Charlotte, besides several fine buffalo and deer, which they are considering letting the Bennett park zoo acquire.

They had their of a chain of lakes which extend a distance of twelve miles northeast towards Quincy. The lakes in this chain, other than Coldwater, are Long, Mud, Bartholomew and Marble.

Through the activities of the Wolverine Portland Cement Company in looking for marl in those lakes, a channel, navigable and safe, has been dug, which now unites the entire chain with over 40 miles of shore line.

These lakes are varied nature, with islands, peninsulas, deep bays and a widely diversified shore line. Fishing is excellent. There are hundreds of cottages on the various shores and numerous excellent building sites await development.

The most important move has been the work done by C. F. Megow, Detroit, on Iyopawa island, Coldwater lake, which is famous in Indian lore as the battleground of the Pottawatomies. By means of a built-in road this island has been transformed into a peninsula of 129 acres extent. Once famous as a fruit and peony farm, it now has a nine-holf golf course, which is increasing in popularity. High point on the island is one of the most delightful spots to be found anywhere on southern Michigan waters.

Enlarge Chromium Plant

The Chromium Plating Corporation of Jackson, due to the increase in production, has enlarged its plant by an additional 5,000 square feet. The new laboratory installation is of the latest type for the analysis of customer's problems as well as the company's, thus insuring uniformity in the deposition and quality of plating. Due to additional orders being received, a new hard plating unit is being installed to take care of the demand for this class of work.

HORSE POPULATION DECLINES IN STATE

The number of horses on Michigan farms decreased 17,000 during the men to destroy the winter homes of past year, but Dobbin is no less needed now than then, according to Prof. Ralph S. Hudson, who is in charge of herse breeding at Michigan State Col-

The reason for the decrease, he asserts, is that farmers while they need horses for certain kinds of farm work do not know where to get them.

Since 1920 the swing from horse power on the farm to machinery has been tremendous and has reached the place where there is a serious shortage afford to buy power machinery, is the sufferer.

To relieve the situation they have turned to the wild ranges of western states and during the first six months of 1929 there were more than 50 carsociation of Chicago.

the horse as the best friend of Iowa's

Reports received by J. W. Long, audiotr of the state, from county auditors, revealed that there were 787,778 horses in Iowa in 1929, while in 1928 there were 814,135. While no accurate data is available, it is believed the number of tractors owned by farmers has shown an increase of 25 per cent or more within the past year.

Horses have been eliminated from wheat farming operations in the Oklahoma panhandle and wheat farming is nearly the only kind of farming carried on there. So seldom is the horse seen playing a part in the endless succession of panhandle wheat fields it attracts nearly as much attention as did the original tractor in the wheat fields. Even fence building and repairing s requiring less attention in the panhandle wheat area each year, as live stock disappears from the farms. The internal combustion engine is the cause of it all. Oil-burning tractors supply the motive power for breaking the sod, and the successive annual plowing and seeding operations. When the wheat is ready for harvest, cilpower for combines that move through the billowy fields of grain like stately ships at sea, mechanically cutting threshing and loading the grain into gasoline-propelled trucks that hurry away at the speed of 30 miles an inour to neighborhood elevators.

Wreck Winter Homes Of Black Stem Rust

advantages as a locality for summer iomes, the United States Department of Agriculture is paying two crews of the black stem rust of grain in this state, according to the statement of Walter Reddy, East Lansing, state supervisor of barberry eradication.

Black stem rust is one of several plant diseases which damage cultivated crops during the growing season and then pass the winter living on some wild plant. The common barberry is the winter host for stem rust. and the destruction of barberry greatly lessens the damage caused by rust.

The crews which are destroying barberry bushes in Michigan are now working in Antrim county. They have in which the small farmer, who cannot found thousands of barberry plants in cutover areas where dense cover nakes the detection of the bushes very difficult.

Black stem rust affects all the small grains and will also live on many varieties of wild grass. In favorable weather the rust spreads rapidly, and causes thousands of dollars of damage to grain crops.

Corn Borer Menaces Monroe County Crop

Farmers of Michigan who doubt that the corn borer is a menace to the corn crops are invited to visit the Monroe corn borer station and to inspect fields of corn in Monroe county which show infestation running as nigh as 90 per cent.

Dean J. F. Cox, Michigan State college, states that the field of Evart Van Riper, Ida, shows damage which will make it unfit for harvest for any purpose except silage. In this field, nearly every stalk contains one or more borers, the average number per stalk is five.

Dean Cox says that this field is as padly damaged as any he saw in Canburning tractors supply the motive | ada when the infested area in that province was visited by a delegation of Michigan people.

Hogs thrive on alfalfa pasture and heavier livestock. The carrying capart of the country will carry stand.

In the east, where a stand is more easily injured by overgrazing, it is of what he was going to say and had not advisable to carry as many hogs to the acre as in the irrigated parts of the west. To get hogs into condition for market, it is necessary to feed a small quantity of grain with alfalfa pasture. With this combination, hogs can be made ready for market cheaper than by any other feed.

Poultry

While Michigan is advertising its SPECIAL GLASS ADMITS ULTRA-VIOLET RAYS

Poultry raisers who are attempting to raise their fowls according to scienific standards are greatly handicapped by the present tariff laws. Ultra-violet transmitting glass, which, it has been proved is highly beneficial to fowls and animals as well as humans, is at present subject to an import duty of 50 per cent. Under the circumstances, the poultry raiser is forced to pay a heavy tax on that which is for him a rital necessity.

The value of ultra-violet transmitting glass has been well established. Ultra-violet light, it is known beyond question, produces healthier poultry and increases the yield of eggs. A deficiency in the amount of ltra-violet furnished to poultry always results in leg weakness and other

As a substitute for the sunshine's nealth rays, cod liver oil has long been used. While this is of undoubted value it is now possible to utilize the rays that come directly from the sun itself. Glass has been perfected that permits the passage of the ultra-violet rays, which are incapable of passing irough ordinary glass.

A test convincingly demonstrating the efficiency of this new glass was recently conducted with 50 Rhode Island Reds. They were not permitted to leave the brooder until they were one month old. At the end of four months their average weight was six pounds, and at the end of 168 days they were all in full lay.

The rapidity with which ultra-violet glass has become popular with farmers and poultry raisers is the result of an almost accidental circumstance. When the glass was invented, about four years ago, its value for human beings was tested by its effect on animals. Chickens were used in the experiment. They benefited from it to such an extent that the manufacturers of the glass soon placed on the market a lower priced glass of the same material, for use in poultry raising.

This glass, however, is made in England, under the secret process of its inventor, Prof. Lamplough of Trinity College, Cambridge, and, although t is a far different product from ordinary glass, it is subject to the same duties. A movement is now on foot to have congress arrange the 50 per cent ad valorem clauses in the glass schedule in the tariff bill recently passed by the house so that they will not apply to ultra-violet glass. The importance of this to the poultry raiser and farmer is obvious.

ABSORPTION OF EGG YOLK IN BABY CHICKS

In open discussion at the convention of the American Baby Chick Producers' Association at Peoria, Ill., recently, the question of unabsorbed egg yolks causing the death of baby chicks was discussed. A. G. Philips of Indiana, made the following statements along this line:

WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 22

The severe storminess which we expect to effect most parts of Michigan during the latter part of last week will still be within reach of this state at the beginning of the week of September 22. Heavy, general rain storms accompanied with fall electrical displays and severe wind storms are the general characteristics and the result of the rapidly changing atmospheric conditions from the summer to the Storminess will be rather uncertain during a greater part of this week with numerous so-called flare-backs. Rainy and stormy weather is quite certain to last over the first three days of this week with more or less unsettled conditions over the middle days.

Renewed storminess will take effect in Michigan about Thursday with sharp storms of wind and local rains. too, at some time or another—by the Storminess during the close of the human newspads who "don't mean to week may be just as severe in their stir up trouble"-by the common garway as those of the first part, but we do not believe there will be as much precipitation from the latter series.

It is quite likely that temperatures will run rather high for the season during Friday and Saturday, but this will not be a very lasting effect. In all probability before the end of the week or, at latest, during the first part of next week, temperatures will take a most decided fall. As a result look for some bad frosts in central counties of the state.

Early Fall Foreseen

Taking the average weather effects for the three fall months of October, November and December, we believe temperatures will average much lower than the seasonal normal. Precipitation during this time period is expected to range somewhat above the normal. In other words, an early, wet fall is anticipated.

"You ought to have a sweetheart, Chatty," Mrs. Mayberry, who never Chatty, spoke unless she meant what she said, would tell her sometimes. "Every girl your age should be meeting young men and going around with them. That's only natural. I was married when I was twenty—and it's a crying shame for you to be shut up here where you never see anyone but a lot of women who want to try on hats!" But Chatty would shake her head firmly.

"I'm not thinking of men, Mrs.
Mayberry," she would say sharply.
"Not me! And I'm not thinking of marriage, either, if it's all the same I'm perfectly happy just as

"But where will I ever meet anybody?" she often asked herself with despair in her heart. "Stuck in this store! . . . I might just as well be buried alive as hidden away here in this place"

For no reason that was clear to herself, she found herself wishing sud-denly that he was not buying them for the girl in the black tam and

"What difference can it make to you what difference can it make to you whether he's buying them for that girl or not? You talk as if you were jealous of her, Chatty. You don't know those people, do you?" Mrs. Mayberry turned to give the girl a quick, questioning look tioning look.

For once she had nothing to say. There was a lump in her throat and a lead weight in her heart, as she filled the little tea kettle in the room at the back of the shop, and set it on the tiny electric stove to boil.

And afterward-long afterward, when she had a chance to look back at a good many things—Chatty knew that that Easter Saturday morning marked the beginning of the bitterness and jealousy that poisoned her life for a long time—and the lives of a good many people who came in touch with

SUMMER CAMP MOVEMENT IS MORE POPULAR

In the last two years the state of Michigan has contributed notably to the summer camp movement in the United States, a form of recreation in which America leads the world. The lodge cabins erected in forested areas of the state parks by the park division of the conservation department for boys and girls vacationing outdoors are proving popular, said P. J. Hoffman, superintendent of parks, at a conference on the usage of wilderness park areas by escorted groups of young people.

Since 1927 when the group camp idea in state parks was started by the conservation department, its popularity has increased so rapidly that in many cases campers must now make reservations in advance. While the demand is heaviest during the summer months, a large number of youthful sportsmen are attracted by the possibility of winter sports, Hoffman declared, and consequently the lodges are frequently occupied during weekends and holidays throughout the cold season.

The group camp buildings now in operation at nine of the state parks are large enough to accommodate two groups of fifty persons each. Stoves, cooking utensils, drinking water, and sanitary conveniences are provided, also cleared places for tents for those who prefer canvas shelter.

Camp regulations state among other things that group camp buildings are for the use of children between the ages of eight years and eighteen with an adult accompanying each group of fifteen or less. The length of stay in one camp is limited to two weeks, although on special permit this time may be extended.

The following state parks are now equipped with group buildings: Bay City, Cedar Hills, Dodge Brothers' Nos. 9 and 10, Interlochen, Marquette, Orchard Beach, Van Buren and J. W. Wells state park.
