All merchants are making much of the relic displays for the centennial. Cobwebs are being dusted from old pictures, old kitchen utensils are being scoured and yellowed legal documents are being brought to light of day. Red Squill powder, in the opinion of the Biological Survey, is, if properly prepared one of the most satisfactory rat poisons now known. Cats, dogs, and other animals usually refuse to eat the material because it causes a tingling and irritation in the throat. It is full of small crystals of calcium oxalate. Rats pay no attention to this feature. It poisons rats, but chickens can eat it without harm. It is brown powder and can be mixed with the feed the rats ordinarily favor. It is estimated that rats do damage of about $2 per head per year and there are probably more than people.

Near the Crater

There be two men whose ways we cannot fathom; yea, there are three we do not understand. The first of the twain is the man who has two wives at the same time. The other is the clerk or accountant who steals from his employers and covers the theft by falsifying his books. The third? He is the man who builds his house on the edge of a volcano that erupts every year or so.

All three are alike in that they know something is going to blow up under them. Peace of mind has been called the summum bonum; it is the one thing they have put out of their reach. Of the three we think the man on the volcano's marge has the most sense. After it lets go, there is a chance that he can build again somewhere else.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Garden Memories

Three thousand years ago the Magus Zoroaster, it is said, met his own image walking in a garden; nowhere else, we must suppose, but in a garden's cloistered peace could such a meeting have been arranged. And when a man lets his thoughts drift back to the happiness, so deep and often so illusory, of his childhood's home, it is in the garden that his memories crowd the thickest, not in the house itself. The Golden age was green with the shadow of boughs and silver with the luster of dew upon the grass.—Exchange.

He Really Lived

Good King Wenceslas, who peeked out of the window at the celebration of the feast of Stephen, is usually regarded as a mythical person. He is said to have really lived, however, and the thousandth anniversary of his birth is about to be celebrated. In Polish his name was Vaclav, which somehow got transformed into the German Wenzel and so became Wenceslas. There are many other stories told about his goodness besides that of the Christmas carol.

STATE OWNS WORLD CHAMP LIVING COW

The world's champion long distance living cow is Traverse Colantha Walker, a 12-year-old Holstein owned by Traverse City State hospital farm at Traverse City. In nine lactations, four of which were 10-month tests and a fifth for 336 days, she has produced 200,114.9 pounds of milk averaging 3.76 per cent fat and containing 7,525.99 pounds of butter fat or enough to make 9,407 pounds of butter.

Colantha's average is 22,234.9 pounds of milk containing 840.6 pounds of butter fat (1,050 butter). Her best record is 1,014.09 pounds of butter fat (1,267 butter) in 26-158.2 pounds of milk, made as an 8-year-old in 365 days, ranking her now as one hundred third on the Holstein 1,000-pound fat list. Her lowest record is in her first lactation while on 10-month test and is 731.35 pounds butter fat (914 butter) in 19,060 pounds of milk. Her latest record, begun at the age of 11 years, 3 months, 26 days, is 23,550 pounds of milk containing 792.75 pounds butter fat (990.9 pounds butter) which is pretty good for an "old" cow.

Ant Eats Building As Mere Appetizer

The old-time, unwelcome guest who was accused of eating his host out of house and home now has his record dimmed by the northern, white ant which will not only eat houses but has sometimes satisfied its appetite by attacking warehouses and public buildings in Michigan, according to the statement of the entomologist at Michigan State college.

This insect is too lazy to walk to houses or other buildings for its meals and waits till its unsuspecting host carries cornstarks or wood in which it is concealed to the house or barns.

Usually, the presence of the ants in the buildings is not suspected until the winged form begins flying around the basements in late winter or early spring. An inspection of the building will then show where the ants have eaten tunnels in the sills and woodwork.

It is necessary to take immediate measures to control this insect when it once has become established in a building. Liberal amounts of kerosene applied in the nests and in places where the ants are working will usually kill them.

Several doses of the kerosene will probably be needed to completely rout the insects. Circular bulletin number 63 issued by Michigan State college describes this pest and gives more detailed instructions for its control.

Some Points on How to Churn

The inexperienced butter maker sometimes fails to get butter after churning the usual length of time (from 30 to 40 minutes) and continues the operation for several hours. There are several causes for difficult churning, says the U. S. department of agriculture.

The churning temperature may be too low; in exceptional cases it is necessary to have it as high as 65 degrees to 70 degrees F. The cream may be too thin; too rich, or too sweet; it should contain about 30 per cent butter fat and be ripened to medium acidity. The churn may be too full. It should be not more than one-third full.

All the utensils should be sterilized; otherwise there may be a rosy fermentation of the cream that will prevent its churning properly. Difficult churning is sometimes due to some individual peculiarity of a cow, in which case it is necessary to get cream from a cow recently fresh, or cream that is known to churn easily, and mix it with the difficult-churning cream.

If a cow has not been fresh for a long time, her cream may not churn readily. Some feeds, such as cottonseed meal and timothy hay, produce hard fat, and the remedy for this is to feed linseed meal, gluten feed, or succulent feeds, such as silage and roots.

Plow in Fall to Better Pastures

At the Beltsville, Md., experiment farm, dairy specialists of the United States department of agriculture seed permanent pasture with a grass-seed mixture in the following proportions: Orchard grass, 6 pounds; timothy, 4 pounds; redtop, 3 pounds; blue grass, 4 pounds; red clover, 4 pounds; alsike clover, 2 pounds. This mixture has proved desirable for the vicinity of Washington, D. C. It is sowed about April 1 on ground that was fall-plowed and manured.

Bank Celery in Earth

Banking rows of late celery with earth not only blanches the crop, but produces celery of superior quality and protects it from early frosts. Celery can often be left in the field two or three weeks after the first frosts if the earth is drawn well up to the tops of the plants. Paper or boards should be used for blanching the early or summer crop because banking with soil causes decay of the plants in warm weather.

Show More Interest In Farming Methods

While the farm population in Michigan has been decreasing, the interest of farmers in learning new angles of their business has increased, according to class records in the short course office at Michigan State college.

The first short courses, three in number, were given in 1897. Forty-five students enrolled in those courses. Last year 19 short courses were given at Michigan State and 455 students enrolled.

Many of these courses last only one week and are designed as a clearing house of new information about a particular subject. Most of the students can spare only a short time from their business, and the short courses meet their needs.

The longest of these courses is the two-year general agricultural course of 16 weeks. Fifty-one men took this course last year.

Five courses are given in dairy subjects, five courses in horticultural subjects, and one each in poultry, agricultural engineering, home economics, bee keeping, seed production, farm management, and veterinary medicine.

The 16-week course in general agriculture begins October 28. All others are held in January, February or March.

Fine Crop Produced By State Nut Trees

Samples of hickory nuts and walnuts already entered in the prize contest conducted by Michigan State college prove that Michigan trees bear crops equal in quality to any previously found in America, according to statements by members of the college horticultural department.

The men in charge of the contest say that there is still opportunity for prize-winning entries before the close of the contest, November 15. Prize winners will be announced at the state horticultural show held at the college at that time.

First and second prizes of 25 and 10 dollars are offered for both hickory nuts and walnuts, and a special prize of a set of horticultural reference books is offered to the Smith-Hughes high school whose pupils send in the best collection of Michigan nuts.

East entry submitted for prizes must be accompanied with directions for locating the tree which bore the nuts. The college department is attempting to locate especially desirable trees which can be used to develop commercial plantings.

Walnut trees come into bearing in from five to ten years depending on the soil and other conditions. Hickories are slower in reaching bearing age but probably will bear profitable crops in from 10 to 15 years.

A large acreage which is not adapted to general farming can be used profitably for nut culture in Michigan.

Lawn Grasses Should Be Sown in the Fall

To urge to seed a new lawn usually come to people in the spring, but early fall is the time when northern lawn grasses should be sown. Fall sowing enable the grass to stool out before winter arrives and to combat weeds better the following spring.

After the soil is thoroughly worked preparatory to sowing, the surface should be firmed with a rake or similar implement, and bone meal applied at the rate of about 20 pounds to 1,000 square feet.

The bone meal helps the grass to make enough growth to get through the first winter in good condition. The seed should be sown evenly and covered uniformly but lightly. Light rolling after covering is often beneficial.

Wounds Frequent Cause For Potato Rotting

Wounds in potatoes are the most frequent source of storage rot, and careful handling during harvest and storage will decrease loss from this source. Cooling freshly harvested potatoes too rapidly may cause wound rot, because of the slowing down of wound repair.

If wounds are properly healed, before potatoes are placed in storage, and if sufficient ventilation is provided to keep them dry during storage, very low temperature is unnecessary to prevent loss by storage rot.

Watch Your Harness

A runaway team can not be stopped with weak reins, nor will weak tugs and straps on the harness withstand heavy work. Harness should be looked over to see that the leather parts have no cuts, holes, brands, thin places, or other imperfections that impair its strength. New harness that shows cracks on the grain side when sharply bent is practically worthless, and cracks in old harness show that it is rotting. Breaks and rips in the leather should be repaired promptly.

Onions intended for storage should be well matured, sound, and so dry the outer scales will crackle or "rattle." Immature or soft onions or those with thick necks, commonly referred to as "bottle necks," should be disposed of and not stored, as they will not keep well.

Poultry

EFFECT OF MOLT ON EGG PRODUCTION

Last year the poultry section of the Iowa experiment station investigated molt characteristics. Three different breeds were used: White Leghorns, Rhode Island Reds and Barred Plymouth Rocks. Two classes of molts, natural and artificial, were found. Natural molt follows the drying and loosening of the skin after the normal season of production. This molt may vary 60 to 90 days between different individuals. A hen will naturally go into a molt when production stops.

Unnatural molt may be caused by improper feeding, which may force the bird to greater speed of production or the reverse. In either case, her body is unable to maintain a steady egg production. Other causes for unnatural molting are changes of environment, transporting birds great distances, severe scare by dogs or wild animals, sudden change of weather, and even the change of feeds.

From the studies the following conclusions have been drawn:

1. Individuals vary greatly in the way in which they molt; many factors affect the time and the rate of molting which makes it a very intricate problem.

2. Many molt factors and the production performance of hens appear definitely correlated, which justifies further investigation of this problem.

3. The hens under observation required an average of 151.3 days to drop old feathers and to grow new ones.

4. High producers required less time to drop old feathers and grow new ones than did either medium or low producers.

5. High producers often took a rest after starting to molt and come back into production. A second heavy molt started later in October or November.

6. If an accurate determination of the time taken to "rest" by many of the high and medium producers could be deducted from the total number of days molting, apparently production and day's molting would be definitely correlated.

7. Medium producers took more time to molt than did poor layers, because the former often slowed up the molt during September or October. The low producers seldom took the complete rest but continued molting slowly.

8. The molt of the primary flight feathers is more closely associated with egg production than is the molt of any other section of the body.

9. The molt of the secondary flight feathers is more irregular than that of the primaries.

10. The usual order of the molt of the secondaries, numbering them from the body toward the primary feathers, is as follows: 1, 2, 3, 4, 12, 13, 11, 5, 6, 10, 9, 8, 7, 14.

11. High producers do not molt as many flight feathers as do poor producers.

12. Very poor layers often do not drop all of their primary feathers because they molt so slowly.

13. Charts on the wing molt show a definite correlation between the speed of the wing molt and the number of eggs laid.

14. Low producers often go through a second partial molt on the neck and primary flights.

15. High producers have the ability to lay more eggs while dropping old feathers and growing out new feathers than do low producers.

16. Contrary to previous statements by O. B. Kent, high producers may lay heavily while dropping feathers very fast in many sections of the body as well as two or three primary flight feathers.

GROW PULLETS BEFORE BRINGING INTO PRODUCTION

October 1st to 15th is the most desirable time of the year to have pullets come into laying. If they are properly fed such pullets may be expected to go through the winter without a molt. They are especially likely to be in production at that time of the year when eggs are the highest. Pullets that lay earlier are likely to be in this condition in the fall and usually molt.

Breeding for high production has made the matter of holding pullets out of production more difficult. It is difficult to hold pullets out of production until they have attained good body weight, size and scale. It is very easy to have Leghorns and pullets of some of the other more common heavy breeds laying at four to four and one-half months of age, but these pullets are certain to lay many extremely small eggs and are very likely to molt. A pullet that does not come in production until she is six months old is in much better condition for the duties ahead of her.

MIX COD LIVER

OIL IN RATIONS

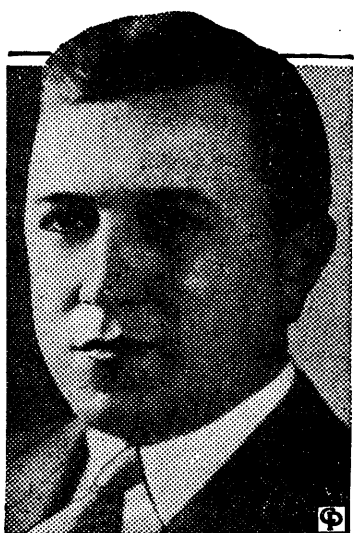

Vitamin A as contained in cod liver oil is an elusive substance disappearing rapidly when the cod liver oil is spread over large surfaces and exposed to light and air. For this reason, when stock feed containing cod liver oil is purchased, the vitamin A substance should be guaranteed to be stable. If it is not, it is better to buy cod liver oil and give it separately or mix it with the ration shortly before feeding.

RESORT GROUP SETS FUND TO GREET GUESTS

The Michigan Tourist and Resort Association, at the suggestion of Elmer J. Hanna of Harbor Springs, recently set aside $5,000 to educate western Michigan residents in proper preparation for increased tourist and resort trade.

Hanna maintained the resort business would be materially injured if increased tourist business should be inadequately handled.

The association asked appointment of a committee to ascertain how insurance rates might be reduced; creation of another committee to bring about a plan for proper inspection of tourists' accommodation homes and recommended the shortening of the school year as a means of lengthening the resort season.

All officers except the second vice-president, a post to be filled by L. J. Thompson, Grand Rapids, were re-elected. They are: President, Carroll F. Sweet, Grand Rapids; first vice-president, Archie E. McCrea, Muskegon; treasurer, H. E. Hastings, Muskegon; secretary and manager, Hugh J. Gray, Grand Rapids.

Members of the executive committee, in addition to the officers, are: C. I. Monroe, Watervliet; John E. Berglin, Big Rapids; and Elmer J. Hanna, Harbor Springs.

The End of an Old Chapter and the Start of a New

Huge Flocks Are Seen on Michigan Tour

Farms where they keep 5,000 laying hens, raise 25,000 chicks, keep 28,000 rabbits, have 1,500 turkeys or grow and market 60,000 ducks a year, were just stopping places along the route of the second annual Michigan Poultry Tour.

That poultry raising has gone beyond the spare time class was also proved by the inspection of plants which are equipped to incubate 140,000 eggs at one time and those which have laying houses to accommodate 5,000 hens.

The trend of the poultry business was shown by barns which formerly had been used to house livestock but which after remodeling, are now devoted to the production of first class eggs.

Eighty-two cars left East Lansing on the tour. Towns visited were Bancroft, Holly, Oxford, Romeo, Denton, Ann Arbor, Bridgewater, Napoleon, Jackson, Springport, Battle Creek, Augusta, Middleville, and Lowell.

A banquet at Lowell which was attended by 200 poultry men was the closing number of this year's tour.

First of 100 Suing Candy Firm Wins

A verdict of $1,318.60 was awarded Adelbert Thompson, Laingsburg merchant, by a jury in circuit court against A. R. Walker of Muskegon, president of the defunct A. R. Walker Candy corporation, his wife and J. J. Kooman of Owosso and A. L. Merrick of Detroit, former officials of the company.

Thompson sued for $12,500. His case was the first of more than 100. An appeal to the supreme court will be taken and plaintiffs' attorneys have agreed not to bring any of the other cases up for trial until the supreme court decides the Thompson case.

More than $1,000,000 is asked in all of the suits.

The plaintiffs all charge conspiracy to defraud, claiming that the Walker officials represented their company as being on a sound basis financially and sold stock on the basis of this claim, when as a matter of fact, they alleged, the company was insolvent as far back as 1920.

Pipes Gas to Eaton

Eaton Rapids was given gas service through high pressure mains from the Lansing plant of the Consumers' Power company during the past week. The lines were extended from Mason to the Eaton county town. The line will be extended on to Charlotte within the next fortnight, and the Charlotte plant which formerly served that city and Eaton Rapids will be abandoned.

The Lansing plant now serves a district including, besides the city, East Lansing, Grand Ledge, Holt, Mason, Okemos, Williamston, Fowler, Webberville, Howell and Eaton Rapids. A new 2,000,000 cubic-foot gasholder and other equipment has been added to the Lansing plant recently and a still larger expansion program is contemplated next year, according to Clark R. Graves, district manager of the company.

STATE OSTEOPATHS WILL MEET IN G. R.

Western Michigan Association of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons is to be host to the members of the state association at a two-day convention at the Pantlind hotel in Grand Rapids Oct. 31 and Nov. 1. Plans for entertainment of delegates at this convention were made at the October meeting of the society.

A downward revision of federal taxes on earned income was advocated in a resolution adopted by the association. Dr. R. T. Lustig, Grand Rapids, president of the association, called attention to the fluctuations in income of members of the profession and mention was made of the expense of preparing for the profession.

Improvement of business methods by doctors was suggested by Dr. R. V. Gladioux of Grand Rapids as a remedy for the heavy load of unpaid bills carried on the doctor's books. Dr. Gladioux pointed out the doctor bill is likely to come last unless he sees that his account is just as collectable as that of other businesses.

FOR CONSTIPATION, DIARRHEA, FEVERISHNESS

SAME PRESCRIPTION •
HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

PLUMBERS OF STATE AFFECTED BY NEW LAW

Approximately 5,000 Michigan plumbers will be affected by the new law which went into operation Aug. 28, requiring the licensing after Jan. 1, 1930, of all plumbers in the state, according to announcement from the Michigan department of health, which has supervision of the enforcement of the law.

Both master and journeymen plumbers are urged by the department to file their applications for license immediately. Those applying before Jan. 1 and furnishing proof that they were engaged in the business of master or journeyman plumber on March 1, 1929, and possess the qualifications required by the law will be granted a license without examination. After Jan. 1, 1930, licenses will be issued only after the applicant has passed an examination prescribed by a board of three plumbing examiners. Plumbers' apprentices also must be registered.

Plumbing inspection will be started after the first of the year when the system of licensing has gone into effect, the announcement continues. Inspectors working under the direction of the bureau of engineering of the Michigan department of health will carry out the provisions of the law.

Reo Gets Japanese Order

The distributor of Reo products at Tokyo, Japan, has recently forwarded to the Lansing plant an order for 100 Speedwagons which are to be shipped as early as possible. The entire shipment will go to a single fleet operator, it is said, who bought another 100 Reo commercial cars earlier in the year.

Fires In Oil Fields Alarm Warden

Recent fires in the Mt. Pleasant oil fields have caused H. J. Andrews, chief fire warden, and C. V. Lane, assistant state fire marshal, department of insurance, to again call attention of all gas and oil operators of Michigan to a bulletin they issued several months ago, reviewing the 1915 oil fire prevention statute.

This statute lists means of eliminating fire hazards in the oil fields, and these were included in the bulletins sent all operators.

All slash and debris created by the erection or construction of derricks, storage tanks, nitro-glycerine magazines, storehouses, dykes and retaining walls, and in the construction of roads to them, must be disposed of in a manner and place satisfactory to representatives of the department of conservation, the bulletin says. If after the slash has been picked up and put on wagons or trucks, the operator can find some other means of disposal satisfactory to the representatives of the department of conservation, such means of disposal can be used.

A space at least 50 feet wide shall be completely cleaned around every drill rig, well, storage tank (whether permanent or temporary), and nitro-glycerine magazine. All inflammable material resulting from such clearing shall be removed and disposed.

On the outside edge of each of these cleared strips a strip of soil at least four feet wide shall be either plowed or shoveled so that the mineral soil is exposed.

A fence shall be strung around each drill rig, oil well, storage tank and nitro-glycerine magazine.

No Smoking and No Trespassing signs are furnished by the department of conservation. They shall be posted by the operator around each drilling operation, producing well, storage tank and nitro-glycerine magazine.

Marriage Records Found Incomplete

Because more than 100 returns on marriage licenses have not been sent to the county clerk by officiating clergymen expected to tie the marital Lyman A. Vincent of Jackson county has appealed for aid to couples contemplating matrimony.

They are asked to give the names of clergymen expected to tie the marital knot when they make application for licenses.

In several recent instances proof of marriage demanded by some couples could not be obtained, the county clerk said, and many persons had been caused embarrassment by the incomplete records.

Belding, Greenville To Remain on M-66

A delegation of Belding and Greenville men who called on Governor Green at Lansing recently were assured by the governor that M-66 would remain as it is and not be swung off to the east from Six Lakes and down over M-43. Governor Green said, however, that Lowell would lose M-66 and that it would go through Saranac, then to Hastings, Battle Creek and on down to the state line.

DEER AND BEAR REFUGE ADDED TO STATE PARKS

A big deer and bear refuge with thousands of acres of public hunting grounds almost surrounding it, has been established by the conservation commission in the Pigeon River district of Otsego and Cheboygan counties.

The refuge with its adjoining public hunting grounds constitutes what the department believes may be the answer to two much discussed questions; how to help increase wild life and still provide good free hunting grounds for the thousands of hunters who are not members of clubs.

During the recent years the conservation department has acquired through tax delinquency, by purchase and by exchange, the bulk of all land and water in a block of country nine miles long and six miles wide and adjoining the 16,000 acres previously acquired in the Pigeon River State Forest and Game Refuge.

These lands lie along the Pigeon River east of Wolverine and Vanderbilt. The river is well known for its trout.

A few years ago deer in this district were few and far between, but a large game refuge, most of which was on privately owned land, was established five years ago. Fires have been held to small areas and the deer have now begun to come back.

Elk were planted here in 1918 and have increased steadily so that they are now often seen by visitors and travelers along the woods roads. Elk are, of course, entirely protected in Michigan.

Bear are also quite common and seem to be more than holding their own in the Pigeon River country.

During the years when partridge were plentiful this district furnished some exceptionally good hunting.

Bus Laws Suggested

Michigan Public Utilities Commission has promulgated six rules relating to the operation of motor buses and trucks for hire. A rule requiring every vehicle to be equipped with two oil-burning torches has been suggested. This rule requires that when a bus or truck is forced to stop on the highway, one torch shall be placed 20 feet ahead and one 20 feet behind. Another new rule is that no driver shall work more than 10 hours in an 18-hour period. Other rules require that every driver shall be at least 21 years old; that every passenger bus shall carry at least one extra tire and that every bus and truck shall be equipped with a standard speedometer which shall be maintained in good working order. Operators of passenger buses are forbidden to smoke while driving.

WORKING WEEK OF FARM WOMEN
OVER 63 HOURS

More than 63 hours a week is the average "working time" for 700 farm women who kept records and reported to the bureau of home economics of the United States department of agriculture.

They reported an average 52 hours and 17 minutes spent on strictly home-making activities alone. This is more than the 44-hour working week which is the standard in industry, the bureau points out. In addition, these women spent an average of 11 hours and 13 minutes a week on dairy work, care of poultry, gardening, and other outside tasks.

Some of these 700 home-makers lived in the middle west; some in New York state, and some in three far western states. The group as a whole represents rather superior home-makers—those likely to cut down working time by intelligent methods. For the country as a whole the average working time would probably be higher, the bureau says.

Figures for the New York home-makers are typical. They show that feeding the family occupied 25 hours and 51 minutes; cleaning and straightening the house required 8 hours and 15 minutes; and that other items in the care of the house added 2 hours and 17 minutes. Laundering, sewing, mending, care of clothing, care of children, and other management and miscellaneous items filled the other remaining hours of the total.

Clearly the farm home-maker enjoys very little of that leisure the modern woman is popularly credited with, according to this study. The city home-maker's situation may be somewhat different. For the farm home-maker, however, ready-made clothing, ready-cooked foods, and better equipment and household conveniences have not offset the fact that at present she gets much less help from other members of the family than the farm mothers of 40 or 50 years ago. At best the farm home-maker still has a long day, and by industry's standard, may be classed as overworked, the bureau of home economics concludes.

Poems That Live

THE LOVER'S SONG
Lend me thy fillet, Love!
I would no longer see:
Cover mine eyelids close awhile,
And make me blind like thee.

Then might I pass her sunny face,
And know not it was fair;
Then might I hear her voice, nor guess
Her starry eyes were there.

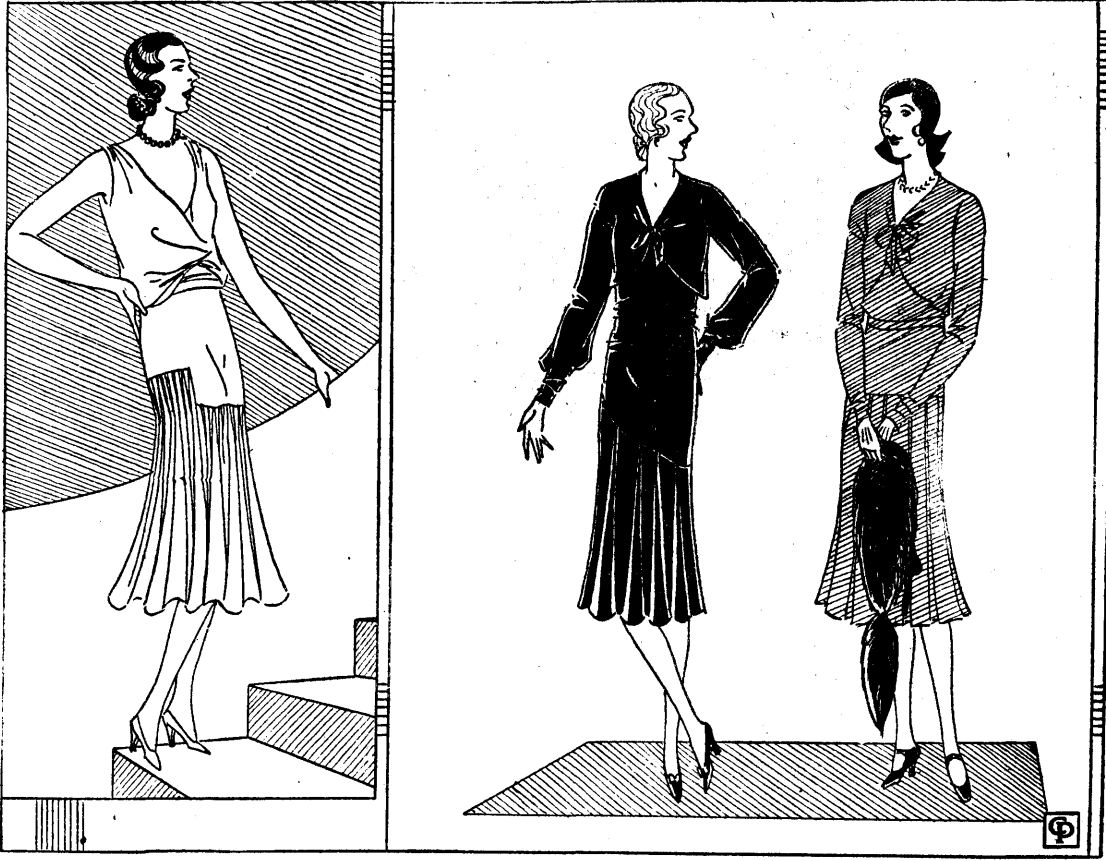

Ah! banished so from stars and sun—
Why need it be my fate?
If only she might dream me good
And wise, and be my mate!

Lend her thy fillet, Love!
Let her no longer see:
If there is hope for me at all,
She must be blind like thee.

—Edward Rowland Sill (1841-1887)

Directoire Influence Seen in Mode

By LUCY CLAIRE

In some of the more recent importations from Paris, especially in the evening or group for formal wear, we find the waistline raised so very high, and the skirts so long, that it reminds one of the era when women were daring enough to leave off their hoop skirts and crinolines for the long, flowing gowns that caress the figure, with the waistline marked by a girdle just under the busts.

In fact, not a few of the buyers and stylists returning from Paris, see a trend toward the directoire period in the new models. It is not quite back to the empire days, but the intricate manipulations, involved cuts, fittings, points, shirrings and crossed bandings that give the flat waistline effect in front, do bring the lines up under the bust.

There is one thing to be said about the raised waistline, and that one thing is rather important. It does give a youthful silhouette which offsets the more mature long skirt. It certainly looks as though waistlines would go higher and skirts drop lower before there is any lengthening of the one and shortening of the other. Some of the later model evening skirts in the Paris openings were but five inches from the floor, just the length our rainy day sisters had such a fuss about when skirts touched the ground in their effort to shorten them a quarter of a century ago.

Fitted Lines Favored

Since girls will be their own sweet selves, and no longer boys, the fitted lines are gaining favor. Everything is now fitted, from the top of the head to the toes of the feet. Curves are once more curves and not straight lines. Shoes are simpler, but daintier than ever before, and kid is most generally used because it gives the glove-like fit in keeping with the snug hip-line and closer fitted body lines of the silhouette.

The empire or directoire influence will be noted in the evening model sketched at the left. Here the waistline is not only raised to slightly above normal, but the soft bodice, with its molded bust lines and crossed front coming well up under the bust, as well as the long, flowing skirt, show the directoire influence. The gown is of transparent velvet in one of the lighter dahlia shades, and is worn with kid pumps of the same color.

In the center sketch is shown an afternoon frock of navy blue crepe, as worn by Elsie Ferguson in her present Broadway success. Here, too, the higher waistline is featured in a princess model with bolero treatment, which gives the effect of the under-the-bust line. The bolero itself, however, would mark the Spanish influence which is strongly felt this season, both in silhouette and colors. Blue kid pumps with the self-leather bow replacing the buckle, are worn with this frock.

Beef Balls en Casserole
Creamed Corn Cabbage Salad
Fruit Salad Coffee
This menu will serve three.

RECIPES
Beef Balls en Casserole—One pound steak chopped, one-half cup bread or cracker crumbs, one egg well beaten, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, one-half teaspoon onion juice. Mix all ingredients thoroughly. Form into balls, place in a casserole in a hot oven and brown the balls. When the meat is brown, add six medium potatoes, eight onions, one green pepper, one teaspoon salt, one and one-half cups tomato soup. Cover the casserole and bake in a moderate oven for one and one-half hours.

Fruit Salad—One cup diced pineapple, two cups diced, canned peaches, one cup seeded white cherries. Mix and chill the ingredients. Drain and serve on lettuce and top with French dressing.

SUGGESTIONS

Successful Casserole Dishes
In preparing casserole meals, one may combine nutritive value and good flavor with the saving of time and labor. Casserole meals mean a lesser number of pans on the stove to be looked after, and also fewer dishes to be taken care of after the meal.

Such meals offer all kinds of opportunities for variety and a saving in expense as well. In casserole dishes, one may utilize the less expensive meats and vegetables, for the long cooking improves their flavor and makes them tender.

Special care should be taken to season casserole dishes properly—a dash of Worcestershire sauce, a bit of prepared mustard, or a few tablespoons of chili sauce or tomato soup, add much to the appetizing flavor of a slowly cooked oven meal.

Launder Often
Changing and laundering hosiery at frequent intervals add more to the wearing qualities than most people know. Hosiery that is worn but one day and then laundered will last twice as long as hosiery worn two or three days. The reason is simple. Washing removes the thinned mesh, so that the subsequent wear comes on the rematted fibers instead of on the stretched and thinned mesh. Almost all guaranteed hosiery is sold by the half-dozen pairs. Why? Because having six pairs of hosiery induces more frequent changes than having only two pairs.

The person who suffers from cold feet or excessive perspiration of the feet should wear cashmere hosiery. You can buy cashmere hose in various weights, from the heaviest to some as fine as silk hose, and beautifully woven.

DON'T HALT PLAYTIME
ABRUPTLY

Billy was four. With his father, mother, and baby sister, he was visiting in the home of a relative. He was building with his cousin's blocks, and he had about completed a fine structure which was very precious to the lad.

Suddenly the father, looking at his watch, observed that it was late, and decided they must go home immediately.

Billy begged that he might wait until he finished his garage. "Just a few minutes more, Daddy, please," the boy begged. "No," replied the father. "Not another minute; we have stayed too long already. Put on your things at once." The lad objected, kicked and cried, yelling, "Darn you, Daddy," whereupon he was made to sit in a chair. No time limit was announced, but there was waged a verbal battle. Dad repeated what the boy had to do, and why he was being punished, and the lad continued kicking, screaming, striking, slipping from the chair, he growing angrier and the father more determined to win out. By and by the boy's coat and hat were forced upon him, and he was dragged out the door into the car, against the best resistance he could offer, shouting loudly, as long as those left behind could hear: "I want to play with the blocks."

This tragedy could well have been averted if the father had been patient, had thought through the situation, and had given the child some warning, a reasonable time for emotional adjustment.

You and I are tremendously annoyed when someone arbitrarily demands that we shift suddenly from what we are doing. But as a rule we just don't respond; we assert our rights and win; at least we almost always find a way to keep our self-respect.

Had he told the lad, "We must go in 15 minutes," or "As soon as the roof is finished we must leave for home," there doubtless would have been no difficulty. As it turned out, more than 15 minutes were used up in the unsuccessful fight, and resistances were set up to co-operation in the future.

A dad will romp with his youngster and enjoy the fun when, by and by, he wearies and announces without warning, "No more." But the child cannot be ready for such discontinuance of his joyful play and, of course, is almost sure to fly into a rage. A better way is to announce, "Just two more jumps, just two more times," so that the child can adjust himself and make ready for the ending.

Wise parents never make demands for sudden shifting or cessation of enjoyable activities by children. They give ample warning. Even when they call the child of five in from play, they first let him know that he will be called in, say, three minutes. Then after three minutes by the clock they have passed they call, expecting the child to come at once. Treated so he can easily be trained to come very promptly.

We cannot shift the child's interests and activities as we shift a lever; feelings don't respond that way. It takes time for emotional adjustments. The sooner we who are parents learn this fact the happier we will be, and the more obedient and co-operative will our children grow. Let's be sensible.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

A young man signing himself "Sonny Boy," writes me his grievance. He is 28 and his wife 25. They have three children. He was wild for the first year or so of their married life—he drank and gambled, but did not go with bad women, he says. He says, "I am a self-raised man. I always was wild. I could not help it."

He came to his senses after awhile, left his home and went away to work, sending all his money home, even denying himself smokes. When he finally came home his welcome from his wife was, "Who sent for you?"

She and her mother and a woman friend and three men were drinking in his home. The wife's father and mother encourage her to drink and run around with a man much older than she.

The question is, what is the husband to do? He is anxiously awaiting my reply.

Try patience and right living awhile and see if it won't work out, Sonny Boy. You started this racket, you see, and really you had no more excuse than your wife. If you were "self-raised" she had parents who set anything but a good example. You have come to see that drink and bad companions do not get you anywhere, now see if you cannot be patient and maybe your wife will discover the same thing.

Take care of your children and try to bring them up properly, and do your best to make your companionship so pleasant that your wife will want to stay with you and the babies. And if your parents-in-law make trouble, you can forbid them the house, you know, although that would be an extreme measure.

Could you move away with your family? That would get you both away from bad company and you could start afresh. You worked in another town when you left your family. Maybe you could find work in the same place again and take the family with you.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am 18 and have been married two years but don't have any children. I have a very pretty little home, and both my husband and I work.

"My husband is so jealous I can hardly bear it. Instead of getting better he gets worse. He won't even let me out to a show with other married girls. My friends advise me to leave him, but I love my home. What am I to do? I have coaxed and pleaded with him but he is just the same. He won't trust me out of his sight.

"Every night when I come home I have to explain everything I did and why. Please help me.

"UNHAPPY WIFE."

You will have to make the choice between your home and peace of mind, dear. Your husband is utterly selfish, and the only way you can manage him is to tell him decidedly that if he continues so unreasonable you will have to leave him. You give him no cause to be jealous, of course. You don't try to tease him by flirting even a little, do you? Because if you do you are to blame a little, too.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: For the last two years I have been going steady with a fellow, but thought I tired of him, and told him I didn't wish to see him any more. I have realized what a mistake I made and would like to win him back. I do not even speak to him. I would be satisfied only to be friends. Please tell me how to do it.

"DISCOURAGED FRIEND."

This answer of mine to you girls who give your boy friends the air and then want them back is getting to be stereotyped. Write him a note Discouraged, and tell him you are sorry you said you didn't wish to see him any more. Tell him you would like to be friends and ask him to come to see you. If he pays no attention you'll know he doesn't want to come back. Probably he'll jump at the chance to come back, however.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

MR. FORD IS A SUCCESS
Henry Ford sat in his old seat in school, not long ago. He sat there, right in time of school, and carved his initials with a jack-knife, in the top of his desk.

The children stared. They stared first at Mr. Ford, the big boy with the sharp knife, and then at the teacher. They couldn't believe it. Here was a fellow who could carve his initials in the desk, right before teacher, and teacher didn't make him stop!

What boy hasn't dreamed of achieving that degree of success?

Of course, Henry Ford dreamed that dream. He sat in that very seat, a good many years ago, and didn't seem to shine very much. His marks weren't high enough to attract attention.

But Henry could dream. Some day he would buy this old schoolhouse, move it somewhere on to his own ground, hire a teacher out of his own pocket, and sit down and carve his initials right before the teacher, and if she said anything he'd fire her. Henry could see those initials taking shape: H. F., with a great big capital H, properly trimmed and cut good and deep. Then the F, with a bit of fancy finishing on the ends of the arms. Oh,

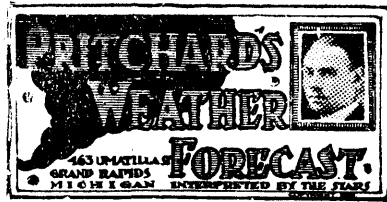

Henry could carve all right, and some day he'd own a dandy big Barlow knife that would make all the kids stare.

Well, Henry did it. He bought the schoolhouse out of hand, and could easily buy ten thousand others just like it if he wanted to. He moved it to his own ground, where he has a whole town of antique houses and inns and people, with children going to the old schoolhouse to study under a teacher employed by himself.

Then he went in and sat down and carved his old desk up good and proper!

Henry Ford is a success. He has reached the pinnacle envisioned by every boy who ever went to a one-room rural school. He couldn't be a greater success if he were to drive the twenty-horse team on the circus bandwagon, right down Main street before all the people in town. Even if he owned a whale ship and stood on the prow and threw the harpoon into the old sperm whale, he would not be any bigger hero.

Don't get discouraged when the teacher keeps you in after school, boys! Anything is possible in this magic America of ours. See what Henry Ford did!

WEEK OF OCTOBER 27

The first few days of the week beginning October 27th in most parts of Michigan are expected to be rather settled, fair and cool like an average October day should be, when a great deal of farm work can be accomplished without overheating.

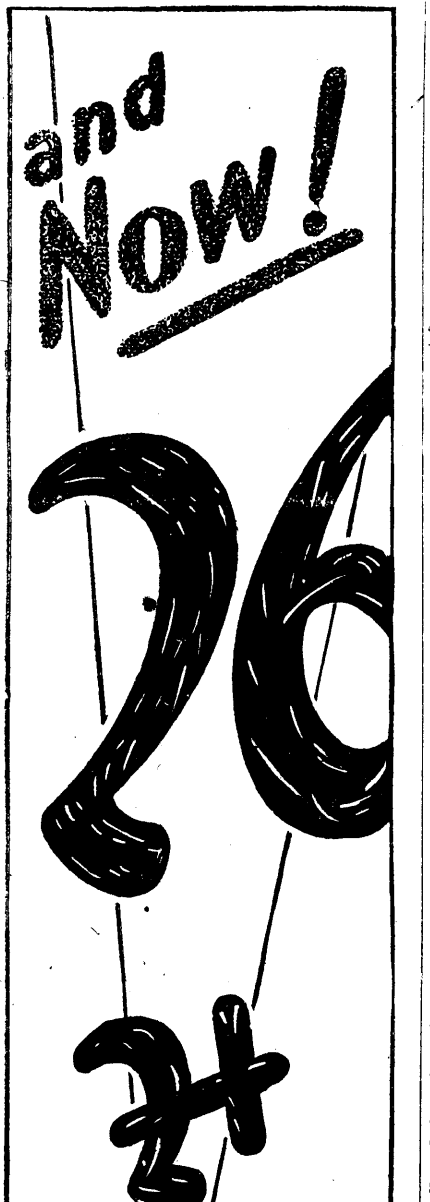

Just before the middle of the week temperatures will have dropped close to the normal reading for this time of year. About Wednesday the sky will have become overcast with clouds generally throughout the state with resultant scattered rains or snow flurries.

For the last half of the week temperatures will fall quite low for this time of year with frosts general throughout the state.

The last two days of the week which are also the first two days of November are expected to be rather cold and stormy, including wind, rain and probably some snow in sections.

November Prospects

Husking and hauling corn and cartage of sugar beets and potatoes will be somewhat hindered during the month of November as a result of the many showery days expected. A great percentage of the days this month will not have a great deal of sunshine and this, together with the wet conditions expected will keep the fields too moist to properly gather the crops still outdoors. Farm work generally will be considerably hindered and little fall plowing will be done during this month. About the only good coming out of this month's weather will be seen in the winter grain fields where wheat, rye and oats are growing. These and meadows should fare well during this 30-day period in most parts of Michigan, where the temperatures are expected to be lower than usual and the precipitation somewhat higher.

over 17 million jars used yearly

MILLIONS more each year follow the trend of modern medicine, and treat colds without "dosing."

Twenty-five years ago Vicks originated the modern external method of treating colds. Today, Vicks is sold in more than 60 countries, and over 26 million jars are used yearly in the United States alone.

Just rubbed on, it acts through the skin like a plaster, and also releases medicated vapors which are inhaled direct to the air passages.

CHATTY GODDESS OF GAB

BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," etc.

COPYRIGHT 1929, CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

"That reminds me—hes' not home yet," Mrs. Chatterton interrupted. "Pud ought to have been home an hour ago. Ben Tomlinson knows I want him home by nine o'clock—and he's promised to send him home then."

By a quarter past ten young Pud had not come, and Mrs. Chatterton went into the front of the house to telephone Tomlinson's drug store at the corner.

"It doesn't answer, Tomlinson must have closed up for the night," she said anxiously to Chatty, coming back into the bedroom. "We'll have to go down and look for him, Chatty. It makes me as nervous as a cat to have him out late like this."

Ben Tomlinson's drug store was in darkness, except for one small blue light that burned in the prescription room behind the store itself.

"Now where do you suppose Pud is?" Mrs. Chatterton wailed, and began to wring her hands. "You know Ben Tomlinson's been letting him deliver packages lately—and heaven only knows where he delivers them or what kind of terrible people he meets."

"He can't meet anybody very terrible in a quiet neighborhood like this," Chatty soothed her. And as she spoke a small closed car came swiftly out of the alley behind the drug store.

The arc light on the corner sent its rays straight into it... and there sat young Pud, with Ben Tomlinson beside him.

"Pud!—Pud!—Putnam Chatterton!" his mother called shrilly, as the car passed her and Chatty.

But neither Pud nor Ben Tomlinson heard her, and the car swung into West River street and sped away into the darkness. The tail light became a tiny red spark in the vast blackness of the night, and then vanished altogether.

"Now, where on earth are they going, do you suppose?" Mrs. Chatterton wondered aloud. "At this time of the night? And why didn't Pud come home? He KNOWS he ought to be at home, and so does Ben Tomlinson!"

It was eleven o'clock before Pud did come home.

His mother and Chatty saw him drive up in front of the apartment house in Ben Tomlinson's car, and saw Tomlinson drive away.

A moment later Pud softly unlocked the door of the flat and came in. His blue eyes opened wide when he saw his mother and sister sitting in the front room—not reading or sewing, but just sitting there, waiting for him.

"Thought you two'd be getting your beauty sleep!" he said, and grinned at them. "Hot ziggety! Will you look at Chatty?"

His twinkling eyes took in the fluffy hair, the pink powder that covered her face, the bright pink nails, and the tops of Chatty's stockings, which had been "rolled" for the first time since Chatty had begun to wear stockings. "A form you love to clutch," he misquoted, with a loud laugh. "Oh, boy! You'll knock 'em dead when you stroll into old Van Nuys' office tomorrow morning, girl!"

"Don't let me hear you speak that way of Mr. Van Nuys, Putnam!" his mother said to him sharply. "Old Van Nuys! You ought to be ashamed of yourself! Now, where have you been until this hour?"

Pud reddened. "Drug store," he answered shortly, walking towards the door that led to the bedrooms.

"No, you haven't... I saw you leaving the store almost an hour ago with Ben Tomlinson!"

"Sure," said Pud, easily. "And that's where I was—with Ben, delivering some packages in his car. He just brought me home. You can call him up and ask him—"

"I don't want to," Mrs. Chatterton told him. "You go to bed now and don't stay down there after nine o'clock any more. Understand? Come along, Chatty, we may as well get some sleep."

But she wouldn't have had her sleep if she had known where he had gone with Ben Tomlinson, and what he had been doing.

She was not to know for a long time.

The next afternoon at four o'clock David Jordan came walking into the room where the files were kept.

Chatty was alone there. For Billie Langenau had gone out at two to hunt for a new place to live, and she had not come back.

"Get out all the dope we have on this man—'George W. Morner,'" he said to Chatty, laying a slip with the man's name on it, down before her.

Chatty opened the filing cabinet that held the names that began with "M." She was quick, and she found the name she wanted almost at once. "Here it is," she said, handing it to him... Jiminy! But wasn't he the best looking thing with his red hair

"It's nice," Chatty said, unlocking the door of the little flat. "A fireplace in the living room, and the cutest little white tile bath."

"It IS nice," Billie agreed, when she had looked it over. And fifty dollars a month isn't bad for it... I think I'll take it. When you're friends with some of the boys at the office we can have them up here for Sunday night suppers and things, can't we? We'll have lots of fun!"

Chatty, watching her drive away in George Mayhew's car, saw bright days and good times ahead of her.

"I wish I hadn't told Jordan about her making up her face," she thought. "I didn't mean to. It just slipped out."

"It's nice," Billie agreed, "I think I'll take it."

rumpled and his face flushed under his freckles as if he had been hurrying all day long!

"Thanks," He took the card. But instead of looking at it he looked at her. And he frowned.

"I like you better the other way," he said. "Much better."

"What way?" Chatty was breathless.

"Without that make-up on your face," Dave Jordan said gravely. "And your hair smooth and tight the way it was yesterday. The minute I saw you I thought, 'What a nice young kid!'"

Chatty stared at him, her big eyes growing bigger with every second.

"But Miss Langenau makes up, and just see how pretty she is!" she cried. "Why, she has hardly any color of her own—and she puts black stuff on her lashes, too. I saw her wash and then fix herself all up this noon before she went out to lunch with Mr. Mayhew."

Davy Jordan raised his hand to stop her. He was laughing.

"Maybe she wouldn't like you to tell all that about her, Miss What's-Your-Name," he said. "Most girls like to have fellows think that their bloom of youth is all their own, you know."

He started away, and then he came back for just a moment. "And most fellows don't like to see girls all made up," he added. "No foolin'!"

When Billie Langenau came back at half past four Chatty had washed most of the powder from her face and she was busily at work, scraping the too-bright pink polish from her finger nails.

"Oh, but I'm tired!" Billie sank into her chair with a little groan. "I've looked at so many flats that I'm just dizzy."

"Find one?"

Billie shook her head in its smart little gray felt hat. "Not a thing—and the rents are all so high—"

"If you could get along with four rooms I could tell you about one that's for rent," said Chatty. "The one that's just across the hall from where I live is vacant—and it's awfully nice and clean and sunny."

Billie straightened up in her chair. "Four rooms are just what my sister and I want," she said hopefully. "I'll go home and get something to eat, and then I'll have George drive me out to where you live... Can you get the key so it'll be there when I come?"

Chatty said she would, and that night she got the key from Mrs. Chatterton, and offered to "show" the flat for the landlord.

At eight o'clock Billie came, leaving her George to wait for her downstairs in his little car that was much newer looking than Dave Jordan's muddy open roadster.

CHAPTER VI
The only real time that working girls have to themselves is Saturday afternoon and Sunday.

And so it was not until the next Saturday afternoon that Billie Langenau and her sister moved into the little flat just across the hall from the Chattertons' flat in Lipton street. They came about four o'clock in George Mayhew's small car. Just behind them came a truck piled high with their household goods.

"Here they are!" Chatty called to her mother, as the two machines stopped in the street below. "I wonder what their furniture is like."

Makes Life Sweeter

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia!

When tongue or breath tells of acid condition,—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant aid to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.

Phillips is the genuine, prescriptive product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

PHILLIPS Milk of Magnesia

It's easy to see from his wonderful condition that this little fellow's mother knows what to do when his stomach or bowels go wrong. No drugs for her! Nothing but pure vegetable California Fig Syrup. At least a million families are never without a bottle of it in their home!

PUT ON YOUR LIME THIS FALL

It is too late to sow alfalfa and many have failed to get their seed in the ground. Sow your lime NOW and work it in and let the winter rain and snow mix it with the soil. Then you are ready to plant the alfalfa seed in June. TWO CARS JUST RECEIVED.

The late Jason Woodman of Paw Paw, than whom there was no better alfalfa grower, recommended that all alfalfa be planted in June as he said that if the ground was ready and clean, there was always at least one rain in June when planting could be done.
