Petition Started to Save Dog's Life

Despite the fact that he put his paws on the lap of his accuser and pleaded for his life in municipal court at Marquette, Judge Charles F. Button passed a death sentence on Chum, a mongrel pup owned by Walfred Nystrom. Prof. L. H. Halverson of Northern State Teachers college, claims the dog bit his 2-year-old son.

Chum's owner will appeal the case on the grounds of mistaken identity. The professor says Chum is a dog formerly known as Clown which Nystrom promised to send out of the city when the boy was bitten last July. Nystrom says Chum is not Clown, and M21, near New Groningen. The Genuine "Rose of Jericho"

These peculiar plants are found among the pines and cedars of Palestine. When you get the plant it will have the appearance of a ball of tightly folded leaflets, dry and dead. Put it in water and it will open up its handsome fern-like foliage, turn green and begin to grow in about twenty minutes. Take it out of the wgter and it œu'ls up, turns brown and becomes dead again. It is capable of apparently dying and coming to life again repeatedly, and will keep in its dead or dormant state for years and reawaken directly upon being placed in water. It is an interesting, curious and most beautiful house plant with fine fern-like leaves of very agreeable fragrance. If you want a "table fern" that will prove satisfactory under all conditions, don't fail to get one of these marvels of plant life. Grows and thrives in a shallow bowl of water, and is greatly admired by everyone.

To Retain Ferries

Following on the heels of the announcement that the Grand Trunk would move all its carferries to Muskegon in April, the harbor commission of Grand Haven and other interested citizens of Grand Haven have become active in an endeavor to meet the emergency.

A port engineer will be engaged to go into the matter and report his findings to the commission. Some action then will be taken to induce the Grand Trunk to maintain its ferry service into Grand Haven.

The Nation's Greatest Son

This portrait of George Washington, highly prized possession of Marshall Solberg, Chicago, is claimed by him to have been painted by Gilbert Stuart. It bears the year 1794, and is signed by the master in an inconspicuous way. Some have thought that the carlicat "Stuart Washington" was painted in 1795, but such is not the case, for John Jay gave Gilbert Stuart a letter to Washington which Stuart delivered waile congress was in session in the year 1794 and Stuart refers to this in correspondence with relatives. It was then that one of the three sittings occurred. There were many portraits of George Washington painted by Gilbert Stuart, but there were only three sittings, so that many of the portraits were copied by Stuart from either completed pic.ures or sketches. It was, of course, not entirely unusual for great painters to make preliminary sketches of their subjects, although they did on many occasions entirely complete their paintings at sittings. This latter procedure was followed, it is thought, by Gilbert Stuart in this portrait. If this is so, it stands unique among the "Stuart Washingtons."

According to a volume in Mr. Solberg's library, Gilbert Stuart admired this picture so much that he retained it himself and would not part with it for many years thereafter. When it landed in the hands of Congressman Gilbert of western New York he loved it so much that he asked that it might be the last object for him to gaze upon in this life.

Washington, Man, Patriot, Statesman

a part of his nature; and, whether in battle or in the midst of popular excitement, he was fearless of danger and regardless of consequences to himself. (Sparks, Jared-The Life of George Washington, p. 458.)

At all times and amid all conditions Washington rang true to the note of a splendid manhood. Hypocrisy and a trafficking in expedients for popular applause no more match with his life than the crime of murder. He had little of the captivating style of speech or manner but regard for the nobility of his character, rather than any rhetorical art or charm of personal address on his part, kept wavering lines from retreat in battle and from mutiny amid privation and suffering to which our neglect had exposed the soldiers of the Revolution. (Underwood, Oscar-The Career and the Wolds of Washington, p. 12.) (State Society of Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Pa., February 22, 1912.)

His Personal Triumph

Then came the horrors of Valley Forge and of the winters in Morris county. Those were the days when desertions were many and enlistments were few, when Washington dared not give open battle and there was hardly left to him a place for retreat. Then came the Conway conspiracy, and the ambition of Gates, and the cowardice of Lee and the treason of Arnold, and a series of persecutions so petty, so bitter, so malignant, that it is amazing how Washington survived them. Then, too, came defeats like that at Brandywine, and battles of uncertain meaning like that at Monmouth. . .

It is easy for us as we read these events in the light of the issue to keep up our courage and understand, the triumph that finally came, but it was a very different thing for Washington. Congress was weak, meddlesome, and vacillating. The soldiers were raw, undisciplined and sometimes mutinous. There were jealousies and libels and forgeries and slanders almost beyond our present ability to believe. . . When I recall Washington's calmness in the midst of exasperating annoyances, his unselfish loyalty when surrounded by cupidity and jealousy and hatred, his faith that put courage into the hearts of men who marched hungry and left bloody footprints in the snow; when I remember how after eight years of this and more he emerged victorious, as calm in victory as he had been serene in defeat. I do not wonder that Frederick the Great is said to have pronounced George Washington's campaign in the Jersies the most brilliant in military annals. (Barton, William E.-George Washington.) Shared Men's Sufferings

Washington did not leave his men and go home to live in luxury, but

stayed to endure privation with them Only he who reads his letters written during these trying times can appreciate his troubles and anxieties. (Mc-Laughlin, Andrew C.—History of the American Nation, p. 168.)

Behold him (George Washington) in 1775 taking leave of his family and his home, and hastening to the relief of a distant and then unknown part of America. See him transforming and cementing a band of rustics into an army. Follow him to the field of battle, and see him first in danger and last out of it. Go with him into Valley Forge, and see him sharing the hunger, the cold, the fatigue of every soldier in the camp. Was there ever such fortitude in adversity? Was there ever such moderation in the hour of victory? (McMaster, John B.—History of the People of the United States, Vol. I, p. 465.)

Washington's Victory

On only one point did there seem to be unanimity and accord. That was that the dogged prosecution of the war and the ultimate victory must be credited to George Washington. Others had fought valiantly and endured hardships and fatigues and gnawing suspense, but without him, who never wavered, they could not have gone on. (Thayer, William R .- George Washington, p. 128.)

The American revolution from a military point of view was a group of little wars rather than a single war. The one integrating force was the person of the great commander, but George Washington held the army and the cause together by his exhaustless patience and courage rather than by any comprehensive plan of war. (Muzzey, David S.-History of the Ameri can People, p. 130.)

To Washington no duty, however obscure, was unimportant, and no deviation from duty, however trifling, was possible. (Hoar, George F .- Washington, p. 31.) (Chicago, February 23,

Put Patriotism First

Washington was an incorruptible patriot. He was one of the few rich men who was not a Tory. A very large proportion of men of large means sided with the British crown; nor must we too hastily condemn them. But Washington, who had more to lose than almost any other man in the thirteen colonies, was not blinded by vested interests, nor bound to conservative action by his wealth and station.

For the sake of the country which he loved he suffered innumerable hardships, was stung by ingratitude and hurt by slander, but he stood firm in his loyalty to the cause he had espoused, and was faithful to the end. (Barton, William E.—George Wash ington.)

There is a life that is worth living now, as it was worth living in the former days, and that is the honest life. the useful life, the unselfish life, cleansed by devotion to an ideal There is a battle that is worth fighting now, as it was worth fighting then. and that is the battle for justice and equality. To make our city and our state free in fact as well as in name: to break the rings that strangle real liberty, and to keep them broken; to cleanse, so far as in our power lies. the foundations of our national life from political, commercial, and social corruption; to teach our sons and daughters, by precept and example, the honor of serving such a country as America-that is work worthy of the finest manhood and womanhood. . . The well educated are those who see deepest into the meaning a cessity of that work. Nor shall their labor be for naught, nor the reward of their sacrifice fail them. For high in the firmament of human destiny are set the stars of faith in mankind, and unselfish courage, and loyalty to the ideal; and while they shine, the Americanism of Washington and the men who stood with him shall never, never die. (Van Dyke, Henry-The Americanism of Washington, pp. 70-72.)

Man of Firm Friendships

The chief thought that runs through all the sayings is to practice self-control, and no man ever displayed that most difficult of virtues to such a degree as George Washington. (Lodge, Henry C.—George Washington (American Statesmen), Vol. I, p. 51.)

Solitude, indeed, is the last quality that an intelligent student of his career would ascribe to him. Dignified and reserved he was, undoubtedly; and as this manner was natural to him, he won more true friends by using it than if he had disguised himself in a forced familiarity and worn his heart upon his sleeve. But from first to last he was a man who did his work in the bonds of companionship, who trusted his comrades in the great enterprise even though they were not his intimates, and who neither sought nor occupied a lonely eminence of unshared glory. (Van Dyke, Henry-The Americanism of Washington, pp. 4-5.)

His passions were strong, and sometimes they broke out with vehemence, but he had the power of checking them in an instant. Perhaps self-control was the most remarkable trait of his character. It was in part the effect of his discipline; yet he seems by nature to have possessed the power to a degree which has been denied to other men. (Sparks, Jared-The Life of George Washington, p. 460.)

Wakefield Made Shrine Worthy Its Memory

The birthplace of Washington long renained a desolate and deserted spot on the banks of the Potomac, set in the most beautiful environment of nature, but with no one there, save a few simple negro folk and ghosts of the past, to tell its significance. In the past the site has not been easy to find. Lying some 100 miles south of the National Capital. Wakefield was not shown on the maps There was little or no information available about this historic' spot where Washington was born and where he spent the greater part of his boyhood., Known by few, it was difficult to get to except by water. In the colonial era, civilization followed the waterways, and the homes of the plantation owners along the Potomac were built upon some inviting spot close to its shores. The broad river was their artery of commerce. Wakefield burned before railroads and high ways supplanted the river. It was never rebuilt, so when highways came they passed Wakefield by.

So the birthplace remained, neglected and forlorn, until only a few years ago when the Wakefield National Memorial association was formed with the purpose of building on the original site as exact a replica of the house in which Washington was born as painstaking research and tedious study would enable it, and to restore the vast acres of the plantation to something more of its size of Washington's boyheod.

House a Mansion.

To reconstruct the home was a task ok no easy proportion. For many years very little reliable information was obtainable as to the size and character of the old structure. There were a variety of opinions extant. Some contended it had been a cabin; others, a mansion. Some thought it was made of wood; others that it was of brick, and still others that it was structure of combined wood and brick construction. After considerable study, however, experts of the association arrived at what they believe to be the truth—that the structure was built of Colonial brick of home manufacture. Excavations on the site established the nature of the construction and the type of brick used. The bricks, for the new Wakefield are being produced from the original clay pit on the Wakefield estate. Research also established that the house was a mansion of considerable proportions, after the style of the big Virginia plantation homes of that period.

Old Colonial Family.

Many of the original furnishings, saved from the fire, are still in the hands of descendants of the family remaining in the neighborhood of the old mansion. These have been turned over to the association. The state of Virginia has constructed a road to the site and the federal government has been asked to dredge and improve the harbor and to reconstruct the wharf in order to accommodate visitors by boat from the Potomac.

The Washington family first settled at Wakefield in 1665, a full century before the Revolution. Col. John Washington, great-grandfather of the President, had come to Westmoreland. Va., in 1656. He died and was buried there in 1676. Maj. Lawrence Washington and Maj. John Washington, his sons, succeeded him.

After their marriages the family lived on separate parts of the Wake field estate until the house in which George Washington was born burned After that the Washingtons continued in other houses on the same land, and descendants still live on part of the same Wakefield estate—a continuous possession, in whole or in part, for 264 years—eight generations.

Mount Vernon Estate.

It was at Wakefield, then, that George Washington was born, February 22, 1732. Between three and four years later the family moved to their estate of 2,500 acres which embraced the present Mount Vernon. There Washington passed about four years of his boyhood. Then his parents-Augustine Washington and his second wife, Mary Ball, a member of another early Virginia family-moved to an estate in King George county, about two miles east of Fredericks burg. There his father died, in 1743. His half brother, Lawrence Washington, with whom George was a great favorite, inherited Mount Vernon; another half brother, Augustine. Jr., received Wakefield as his patrimony and George was to have still another farm when he grew up. Mrs. Washington retained the King George county es-

As there was a good school near Wakefield, and none near his mother's estate, George spent much of his time at Wakefield until he was sixteen years old, when he returned to Mount Vernon, Lawrence, upon his death, having left him the estate.

Incidental to the restoration of Wakefield there has been a better appreciation gained of the circumstances of Washington's family. Much of our own American story has grown out of the old Weems biography, published shortly after Washington's death. That gave us the cherry tree story and other incidents of his life, many of which were doubtlessly true. It pictured Washington as springing from a owly lineage and having that sort of a cultural background well calculated to produce a man who would lead the revolt against monarchial oppression.

Family of Aristocrats.

The truth of the matter as these researches show, is that Washington's forbears were intense royalists and closely allied to the house of Stuart.

Thomas Washington, an uncle of the founder of the American family, was attached to the court of Charles I, which gave the family a secure social standing in England. He accompanied his sovereign to Spain, where he died and was buried on the grounds of the British embassy. A brother of Thomas, and father of the man who fled to America, was Rev. Lawrence Washington, proctor of Oxford university, one of the chief royalist strongholds in England. As far back as the family history goes in England, the Washingtons belonged to the aristocratic landed gentry and were fervent supporters of the throne. So, too, with the American branch. At Wakefield, in Washington's youth, the stables held upward of thirty riding horses.

The restoration of Wakefield gives the nation another. Washington shrine second only to the beautiful home to which he retired after his years of honorable service both in war and peace had won for him the title, "Father of His Country."—Kansas City

Standard of Excellence

Washington was born a Virginian and died an American. The last public address he made to his countrymen contained an appeal to exalt, 'American," which belonged to them in their national capacity, above all appellations derived from local discriminations. The name that he left is not only incomparably the greatest to which all classes and sections of his. own country can as yet pay equal tribute; but for a century and a half it has been to the whole world a byword? for liberty and unselfish public service. and self-abnegation. - Detroit Free-

Note for the Gabby

When another speaks be attentive yourself and disturb not the audience.

Work of Many Inventors

Electric meters were devised early in the development of electricity by numerous inventors and are of three different kinds. The earliest type of ampere-hour meter was the Edison zinc-sulphate electrolytic meter, but the trouble of reading it caused it soon to be replaced by mechanical meters. A large number of such have been invented, as those by Ferranti, Elihu Thomson, S. Evershed, Chamberlain, Hookham and others.

Handy for Housewife

The hearth in a house in Abersychan, near Pontypool, Wales, is never swept. All the ashes are scraped into a huge hole which has appeared under the grate, and which never fills up. This is one of the freak results of subsidences on the Abersychan mountains, where huge holes and "slips" have occurred.

National Park Holdings

Yellowstone and Hot Springs were set aside as government reservations before any private claims were made on the land. Practically all other national parks contain some private land. This land is being acquired by the government when satisfactory arrangements can be made.

Admission to Statehood

The Constitution sets up no population requirement for the admission of a territory into the Union as a state. Congress, in 1872, adopted a measure which declared a new state must have sufficient population to entitleit to at least one representative. At that time 121,425 persons was a sufficient number. However, later congresses admitted Nevada, Wyoming: and other states, although their populations were less than this figure.

And Odd, Isn't It?

The person who would be missed the least is usually the first to arriveand the last to leave.

The present low egg price and money shortage is causing a lot of flocks to be sold for meat. A flock of 175 leghorn pullets laying 90 eggs per day was sold for meat here Tuesday. Most flocks are being culled more closely than ever before.

Larger Leghorn chicks have 12 years of trapnesting back of them, together with three direct importations of breeding cockerels from the world famous Tom Barron strain of Cathforth, England. The best way to prevent colic, doctors say, is to avoid gas in stomach and bowels by keeping the entire intestinal tract open, free from waste. But remember this: a tiny baby's tender little organs cannot stand harsh treatment. They must be gently urged. This is just the time Castoria can help most. Castoria, you know, is made specially for babies and children. It is a pure vegetable preparation, perfectly harmless. It contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics.

U. OF M. GRADING SYSTEM UPHELD AT UNIVERSITY

Yearly in every large college or university there is active discussion both among students and teachers in search of a perfect marking system which will guarantee fairness to all. Apparently these debates are destined to take a lesser place in the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts at the University of Michigan, after two joint faculty-student committees have recommended no change, and state as their conclusion that "the differences between grading systems are of much less importance than the fair and wise administration of whatever system happens to be in use.'

Up to 1912 instructors reported student as passed, conditioned, or not passed. Since that time, however, the now widely used letter system of grading from A to E, together with awarding honor points for work of each quality. Later the "flunking" grade of "E" was given a negative value in honor points, and was a decided step in higher scholarship requirement. But no system is perfect, and a certain amount of student complaint, together with feeling on the part of some instructors that absolutely accurate marking was impossible on the letter scale, led to faculty and students being asked to meet in conference in 1926 and 1930. At neither meeting was any major abuse of the marking system revealed, and both parties agreed that it solved the

Rural Progress Day at W. S. T. C. March 3

The twenty-sixth annual Rural Progress Day at Western State Teachers College, Kalamazoo, will be held at the college on Friday, March 4, sponsored by the Rural Education Department of the institution, one of the first Rural Education Departments of the United States established at a Teachers College.

Preliminary announcements regarding the event made by William Mc-Kinley Robinson, head of the Rural Education Department at Western State Teachers College, indicate that the program for the twenty-sixth annual session will be a most notable one, exceeding if possible the brilliant program of the silver anniversary meeting a year ago.

Henry A. Wallace, Des Moines, Iowa, editor of Wallace's Farmer and Iowa Homestead, will be one of the principal speakers at the affair. He is the son of W. A. THEY DON'T CHANGE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Emeritus Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

We change very little after we are this fact at one time or another before, but it is more and more impressed upon me as time goes on. fourteen Betwee⊭ and eighteen our habits are pretty definitely formulated and if they change it is generally only in degree. Only a revolution or a crisis will effect any material change.

I used not to think so. Going to college or getting married, or taking up a business of some sort, I imagined would work miracles in the development or the modification of a man's character. I see now that none of these things makes very much difference.

I hadn't seen Maguire for more than thirty-five years until he dropped upon me a few weeks ago. He was the wittiest, cleverest man in my class, cheerful, happy, ready for a lark and ready to laugh at a good joke even if it were on himself. He did his work easily and well; he had a keen insight into human nature and a dependable judgment in critical matters. He was clean-minded and reverent. When he decided to enter the legal profession we all thought he had chosen wisely, and then having finished law he suddenly decided to enpriesthood of the Romar church. I hadn't cast him in that role, but the qualities he had revealed when we were young fellows are admirable qualities for a leader of the church.

He had not been in my office ten minutes until I saw that, priest that he is, he has not changed excepting to strengthen the fine qualities which he had revealed when we were boys together. He still has the happy outlook upon life and the keen sense of humor which is so characteristic of the Irish.

Gow Herds Employed to Clean Up Grain Fields

During the past two or three years an increasing number of farmers in Kentucky and other states east of the Mississippi river have established herds of grade beef cattle which they carry on a commission basis. These herds replace, in many instances, the steer-feeding products on these farms. The cow herds are run more or less as scavengers to clean up grain fields and pastures that are not good enough for fattening steers. These herds are carried through the winter on an inexpensive ration and they make better use of the extremely coarse, rough feeds produced on the farm than any other kind of live stock. The breed ing cows do not have to be carried in high condition at any time of the year, and if good judgment is used in the management, it seldom becomes necessary to feed them grain during the winter menths. Records kept on a number of farms operating on this basis show that the carrying cost of heef cows, including pasturage, taxes, depreciation and bull fees, amounts to only $18 to $28 a head per year. During this period the cow raises a calf which is more valuable than one which can be bought in the range country and shipped to the feed lot, and the price is much lower .- Southern Agriculturist.

Ancient Theater

Pompeii's theater is variously stated as seating 10,000, 17,000 and 40,000. It was erected by the great Pompeii and completed in 52 B. C. It was the first stone theater in Rome, and had a marble interior. It finally collapsed in the Sixth century, A. D.

right, the war people. The peace people ate only vegetables, the war people meat. Later, they gave each other some of the different foods, and thus all came into possession of a variety.

Later, the two bands met a third, very warlike folk, but managed to make peace with them and admitted them into the tribe. And this, briefly, is the origin of the Osage.

Legend also relates that later the Osage were living on the banks of a great river, which overflowed, sending the people panic-stricken in four directions: to the top of a hill, to an upland forest, to a thorny thicket, and to the foot of the hill. These last two united. Even at present, the Osage are divided into three communities, in commemoration of this event. The *Dwellers-Upon-the-Hilltop" have their village at Grayhorse; the "Dwellers-inthe-Upland-Forest" at Hominy, and "Dwellers-in-the-Thorny-Thicket" and "Dwellers-Below" at Pawhuska.

Marquette noted them on his map of 1673, and they remained where he found them for about two hundred years, when they moved westward.

This tribe was always at war, and most of the neighboring Indians held them on terror on this account. Still, they could be generous, for the Illinois, who had been their foes, fled to the Osage for protection when driven west of the Mississippi by the Iroquois.

Lewis and Clark have recorded that nearly half of the tribe migrated to the Arkansas river, and took its name. They give the numbers of the Great and Little Osage and the Arkansas band as more than 1,300 warriors.

The three divisions of the tribe which date from legendary days have always been kept separate, and each division had certain functions. For instance, if an enemy should slip into the camp circle and appeal to the chief of the peace people, he was in duty bound to defend him. The more peaceful ceremonies were delegated to this division, such as the naming of children. The war people, which included the third division, took charge of the warlike duties of the tribe.

Certain families carried on the manufacture of war pipes, mocassins, etc., and heralds were chosen from certain other families. While these smaller "offices" were hereditary, the highest place in the tribe, that of head chief, was electoral. Thus, on the death of a head chief, four candidates were named by the leading man, and one of these was chosen as head chief.

The Osage were visited by Capt. Zebulon M. Pike in 1806. This famous explorer stayed more than a week in their villages on the Little Osage river, and mentioned them in the report of his expeditions.

Most of what is now Missouri and the northern part of Arkansas, the property of the Osage, was ceded to the United States by treaty in 1808. This left them with all of Oklahoma north of the Canadian and Arkansas rivers, a not inconsiderable property, but they reduced the extent of this by further treaties, until the limits of their reservation were fixed. Their agent reported the land as being "poorly adapted for civilizing purposes," as there was but one small fertile valley on the reservation, but since then minerals and especially oil have been discovered on the Osage land, with the result that, as far back as 1906, the Osage were the richest Indian tribe in the United States, having funds of more than eight and a half million dollars in the United States treasury, which brought them an income of nearly half a million a year. Pasturage leases added to this

The Osage are rapidly decreasing in numbers on account of intermarry with the whites. The census of 1910 gives only 825 as full bloods out of 2,100 enrolled as Osages, and it is even said that many of the 825 are of mixed blood.

That buffalo was of great value to the Indian is not doubted. Mezieves lists the ways in which this animal is of use: "Besides their meat, it furnishes them liberally what they desire for convenience. The brains are used to soften skins, the horn for spoons and drinking cups, the shoulder blades to dig up and clear off the ground, the tendons for thread and bowstrings. the hoof to glue the arrow feathering. From the tail hair they make ropes and girths; from the wool, belts and various ornaments. The hide furnishes saddle and bridle, tether ropes, shields, tents, shirts, footwear, and blankets, to protect them from the cold."

 WHITE "MISSY"

By STANDISH BRADLEY REAMER

* (© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service)

SMALL town down in Oklahoma -dignifiedly named after a former president. A town of twentytwo hundred beings-only one white and that one a woman. It's at the edge of the oil regions; but it retains its identity as a shipping point for plantation products-largely cotton.

Mrs. Netty Young sat at the telegraph desk as the train pulled in. She was operator at the station—a life appointee, first because of the heroism which brought death to her husband and second because she was competant enough as an operator to take the few messages regarding train movementsfor a personal message to or from a town inhabitant was a rarity. Two years had passed since her husband was killed by a passing train from the path of which he had hurled a toddling pickanninny to safety. Two years of such activities of an unusual character for a woman in her position that sadness at her loss long had been soft-

As she dispatched the regular train passing formula, she noticed that a man—a white man—was standing on the station platform, evidently having alighted from the train

After gazing fixedly at the one main street of the town a few moments, the man turned into the station. Raising his hat, he said:

"I'm wondering if there is a hotel in this town-or some place where I can put up for awhile." Mrs. Young smiled in a friendly manner and replied, "No, we have no hotel here. Only traveling men stop here—and get out as quickly as they You see-well, I am the only white person in the town."

"What?" the man cried in surprise. "Do you mean that the entire population is colored?"

"Yes. The people here—that is the men-all work in the oil fields, going over on the train-and the women work in the cotton fields, or do housework on the plantations."

"Well, why do you stay here?" Mrs. Young flushed-pleasantly, for she could not feel indignant at the honesty of his searching eyes. Before she could reply, a small colored girl entered the station, weeping, and putting out a dark finger cut and bleeding, and cried out. "Fixie, Missy, fixie."

Mrs. Young turned smilingly to the man. "That is my answer," she said. "These people—all of them—depend upon me. I am their 'first aid' on almost every occasion—injury, like this, their family troubles, even their love affairs. It is my life work." When she had finished and the child had scampered off without even a "thank you," she turned to the stranger and said, "You cannot find any place in town where you would want to room."

"My name is Railton-Charles Rail-This town is near to a locality in which I have certain interests. You see, I am a rancher-far western part of the state. Dad's ranch-left to me to carry on when he died, although my college training fitted me for city business life. I suppose I must go on to Tulsa to find a hotel-but" he hesitated, then resumed haltingly, as he continued studying her features, "I wish there was some place here. You see-well, it's so close to where I

Nettie had been moved strangely by Railton's appearance and his evident appreciation of her neat, mature

"There is a vacant cottage on the street back of the station," she said. "It is clean and neat. If you could 'batch' it-probably you can get some one of the neighboring women to cook and clean house for you. "Just the thing," Railton replied, heartily. "I'll take it solely upon your recommendation."

Nettie closed the station office and went with him to the cottage and also called upon a colored woman of the old "mammy" type who agreed to cook for Railton.

Days passed and Nettie and Railton became friends. Railton never tired of hearing Nettie's tales of how she took part in the lives of the colored peo ple about her. To them she was "missy"—to young and old she was the arbiter of disputes, the healer of family jars, the refuge of youth and maiden when hearts were wrung with doubt or jealousies. But her work among the children interested Railton the most. Unprovided with school facilities, "Missy" undertook to instruct the children through twice-aweek "school" held in the station office.

Railton finally told Nettie he had invested a considerable sum in the oil regions about Tulsa and had come. to keep a watch on affairs without his presence being known. Their friendship developed quickly-grew into the steady, lasting love of mature lives and shortly Railton insisted upon their marriage. Nettie, however, refused to consider wedding Railton unless he would consent to erecting a home outside of the town and establishing a school, to be under her direction and maintained by him until the school district should see fit to take control. Railton not only promised all she asked, but proved his earnestness by having construction work on both home and school started while awaiting the arrival of their wedding day.

When "Missy" was married the entire population of the town joined in a wild celebration at which "Missy" was overwhelmed with the people's crude expressions of gratitude for what she had done for them.

STATE OF MICHIGAN

To the Circuit Court for the County of Van Buren in Chancery:

The petition of Oramel B. Fuller, Auditor General of the State of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, respectfully shows that the list of lands hereinafter set forth and marked "Schedule A," contains a description of all lands in said County of Van Buren upon which taxes were assessed for the years mentioned therein, and which were returned as delinquent for non-payment of taxes, and which taxes have not been paid; together with the total amount of such taxes, with interest computed thereon to the time fixed for sale, and collection fee and expenses, as provided by law, extended against each of said parcels of land.
Your petitioner further shows to the Court that said lands were turned to the Auditor General under the provisions of Act 206 of the Public Acts of 1893; as delinquent for non-payment of said taxes for said years respectively, and that said taxes remain unpaid; except that lands included in said "Schedule A" for taxes of 1890 or prior years were returned to the Auditor General as delinquent for said taxes under the provisions of the general tax laws in force prior to the passage of Act 200 of the Public Acts of 1891, and which taxes remain unpaid.

Your petitioner further shows that in all cases where lands are included in "Schedule A' as aforesaid for taxes of 1890 or of any prior year, said lands have not been sold for said taxes or have been heretofore sold for said delinquent taxes and the sale or sales so made have been set aside by a court of competent jurisdiction, or have been cancelled as provided by

Your petitioner further shows and avers that the taxes, interest, collection fee and expenses as set forth in said "Schedule A" are a valid lien on the several parcels of lands described in said schedule.

Your petitioner further shows that the said taxes on the said described lands have remained unpaid for more than one year after they were returned as delinquent; and the said taxes not having been paid, and the same being now due and remaining unpaid as above set forth, your petitioner prays a decree in favor of the State of Michigan against each parcel of said lands, for the payment of the several amounts of taxes, interest, collection fee and expenses, as computed and extended in said schedule against the several parcels of land contained therein, and in default of payment of the said several sums computed and extended against said lands, that each of said parcels of land may be sold for the amounts due thereon, as provided by law, to pay the lien aforesaid.

And your petitioner will ever pray, etc. Dated January 18, 1932
