MICHIGAN TAGS

Michigan's resident hunting license is 54c lower than the average fee charged residents in other states and is one of the few states in which no general fishing license is required, the Department of Conservation has indicated from figures compiled from hunting and fishing license fees charged in the various states.

Thirty-two states having licenses to hunt game charge residents an average of $2.39. Michigan's resident small game license costs $1.75. Fees in other states range from 65c to $8. Twenty-five states provide for a combined hunting and fishing license for residents. These licenses average $2.79. Michigan has no such license.

General fishing licenses are provided in 29 states and these vary in cost from 65c to $5.00. The average cost for a resident general fishing li cense is $1.60. In Michigan residents pay $1.75 for a license to fish for trout. No license is required to residents to fish in season for any other Michigan now charges non-residents a fee of $4.00 to fish in Michigan waters. The average fee for non-res ident fishing licenses in the 46 states having such licenses is $4.09.

Eighteen states having combined hunting and fishing licenses for nonresidents charge an average of $21.65. Michigan charges $10 for non-resident deer hunting licenses but has no general license.

While more or less complicated and specific provisions for non-resident hunting licenses in other states do not permit of accurate comparisons with the fees charged in Michigan, it is believed that the non-resident deer license is much higher than those charged elsewhere.

Resurrection Plant

The Genuine "Rose of Jericho" These peculiar plants are found among the pines and cedars of Palestine. When you get the plant it will have the appearance of a ball of tightly folded leaflets, dry and dead. Put it in water and it will open up its handsome fern-like foliage, turn green and begin to grow in about twenty minutes. Take it out of the water and it curls up, turns brown and becomes dead again. It is capable of apparently dying and coming to life again repeatedly, and will keep in its dead or dormant state for years and re-awaken directly upon being placed in water. It is an interesting, curious and most beautiful house plant with fine fern-like leaves of very agreeable fragrance. If you want a "table fern" that will prove satisfactory under all conditions, don't fail to get one of these marvels of plant life. Grows and thrives in a shallow bowl of water, and is greatly admired by everyone.

The mild winter with ample but not excessive precipitation has resulted in excellent growth, and the loss of acreage from winter-killing and heaving promises to be no greater than last spring or about one-half the average apandonment during the last ten years. Home Cabbage and Cauliflowers

Fine, solid heads of cabbage are always a prize in the home garden and tempted.

The space could much more profitably be given to cauliflower, which is market than cabbage. The small pointed head types of cabbage, such as the well-known Jersey Wakefield, are generally considered the best, most easily grown, and surest heading for the small garden.

The home gardner would do well to grow Savoy cabbage for the table, the finest quality cabbage, but not a good keeper and not widely grown for the market. It should be grown to be used direct from the garden. Cabbages like rich soil, as rich as they can be given, plenty of moisture and good cultivation.

Cauliflowers rejoice in the same conditions. In the small garden they can be set two feet apart each way, and they should be hoed often and watered freely. That is the secret of getting fine, snowy "curd" as the 'flowers" are often called. When the heads get the size of an apple, gather up the big, loose leaves and tie them by the tips. This will keep the sun off the "flower," protect it from insects, and at the same time blanch it. If exposed to the sun it will not have the desired white.

Farmers reduced their laying flocks only 2.6 birds during February against 4.4 last season, so that total numbers per flock are only 2.5 per cent less than a year ago. Inability to finance as well as unwillingness to take the risk have been keeping demand for eggs for storage in check.

EDITH JAFFREYS had two admir-ers who counted—William Lester and George Calton. As a rule, Lester was away ahead of Calton in the race, but just now a quarrel with William had brought George within measureable distance of the winning post.

The quarrel was about-well, several things; one thing leading to another, as they will when two positive characters get to arguing-smoking by women, bobbed hair, "ships and shoes and sealing wax and cabbages and kings."

The first time Edith had refused George Calton, George felt that life had turned to dust and ashes. Each subsequent refusal left him less and less afflicted. Edith had become merely a habit with him, but she had so long been the object of his dreams that he thought she was so still and made love to her automatically.

The evening after Edith's great flareup with William, George made his semi-annual proposal. This time it went, "Edith, when are you going to throw over Bill Lester and marry me?"

"Mr. Lester and I, with my consent, will never meet again," she answered. "And, George, I will marry you at any

George was amazed at his own sensations. He knew that he ought to be deliriously joyful; but subconsciously he had a feeling of dismay.

The answer flashed across him suddenly. Helen Marlowe! Yes, hang it! he was in love with Helen Marlowe and engaged to Edith Jaffreys, George groaned as deeply on this, the first night that Edith had accepted him, as he had on the first night she had rejected him.

Edith, after George had gone, at first fairly gloated over the hopeless agony that William Lester would suffer when he learned of her new engagement. Then she began to be sorry for him, and by the time she turned off the light and got into bed she was crying. Next morning she thought: "If William will only apologize for his outrageous conduct perhaps I might-but I'm engaged to George!' She was moody and irritable all day, revolving impossible schemes to extricate herself.

George had proposed and been accepted on Wednesday. Thursday he did not show up. Friday afternoon Edith packed her bag. She had a great aunt living out on Long Island. Meantime George had been going through the same mental processes as Edith. "I shall go crazy if I think of this much longer," thought he. "I can't face this girl! I'll disappear for awhile; that's what I'll do. Something may turn up in the meantime."

He packed his bag and bought a ticket for Champville, Long Island. It was a small town. He had never been there: but he had heard it had a good hotel which was open the year round. At this season the hotel would not be likely to have many guests and there was no chance of encountering anyone he knew.

Five people got off the train at Champville. Three of them hurried through the little station to waiting automobiles. Two stood on the platorm and stared at each other in sternation. The two were George and

"Why George!" "Why Edith!"

Just then an automobile came rushing up to the station on the further side and two familiar voices were heard in the waiting room.

"I knew we should not get here by the time the train did," said the voice of Helen Marlowe

"What's the difference?" replied the voice of William Lester; and then he and Helen saw George and Edith standing there staring at each other. With a joyful cry Helen rushed out, William followed more cautiously, as not entirely sure of his reception. "Then you got Jack Huntington's wire all right?" cried Helen. "You see, in making up his house party, he quite forgot to send you invitations. But as soon as William and I arrived, he wired at once. But gracious! how did you make the train? He only wired half an hour ago. Edith where are your trunks? Gone astray? Phone at once and find out about them But first, William, you drive Edith over to Soundedge in the two-seater and send back a car for George and me. George is going to get a wigging in the meantime. He has avoided me for two days."

Edith had never been so glad to see anybody in the world as she was to see William. They made it all up on the ride to Soundedge. Before she got into the car she said: "Remember what I said to you Wednesday night? Of course, you understand I was only

"Oh, perfectly," replied William with beaming face.

HOSPITAL HAS ONE OF FINEST X-RAY DEPTS.

After four months of remodeling and installing new equipment, the University of Michigan hospital, in Minnesota, opened i new X-ray work second only to the Mayo clinic in Minnesota, opened its newX-ray department recently, which visiting experts pronounced unexcelled by any similar installation in the country.

The new unit is featured by a novel plan of rooms and apparatus which stresses convenience and privacy for patients and the quick processing of the x-ray films. From waiting rooms the patients are directed to private dressing rooms from which they pass by private corridors to the proper department as called. A complete "traffic system" of lights which indicate what rooms are in use to all offices of doctors and the directing staff makes possible quick routing of patients, so that routine X-ray examinations may be made at the rate of twenty an

Rapid development of films to aid doctors to make an early diagnosis is made possible by a modern dark room, provided with dry air from which all moisture has been chilled out by special refrigerating machinery. Once in operation for the day, the room need never be lighted or work stopped, the completed films being passed out through a double doored, light-tight well for final rinsing and drying. From the drying rack they may be taken directly to the physician's offices, each of which has its own viewing apparatus, so that a report may be given in a fraction of the usual time needed.

Among other details of the equipment, are lead lined rooms which confine the rays of high voltage treatment apparatus, with lead glass windows through which the doctor or is technician may observe the patient, a room in which X-ray films of the chest cating foreign bodies in the eye, and automatic apparatus, which, as soon sets itself for the second steretscopic worn so far. exposing. Not "MY BANK" Not "YOUR BANK" But "OUR BANK"

A BANK is not an individual but a COMMUNITY enterprise. Depositors, borrowers and stockholders in each community commonly refer to it as "My Bank" and it is, but in reality they should say "Our Bank" for it takes all three to make it

In the last few years as never before, residents of a locality recognize the vital part the bank plays in their everyday life. They are dependent on the bank and the bank is equally dependent on them. Only by working closely together will the welfare of the community as a whole be promoted.
